SAN FRANCISCANS SCARED NOT HURT

Earth Tremor Startles Guests at Downtown Hotels Out of Their Sleep, But Even China on Shelves Not Damaged

FOUR SHOCKS ARE FELT WIDESPREAD IN EXTENT

First and Sharpest Quake Is of Four Degrees Maximum—Others Follow at Intervals for Four Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—San Francisco residents were awakened today by earth shocks that startled the guests of the downtown hotels. Not a building in the city, even the oldest and flimsiest construction, was injured, except for a few broken windows and cracked plaster. Some hotel guests dressed and sought the open spaces, where they remained a short time and then returned to their rooms. The shocks, of which four were felt here, extended from Santa Rosa, sixty miles north, to Paso Robles, 180 miles south.

The first tremor was registered by the University of California seismograph at 4:35 a.m., the second an hour later and two others at 6:42 and 8:04. The first was the sharpest and the others of mild intensity, the last one not being felt generally.

Merchants report their stocks undisturbed and those dealing in china said they suffered no loss.

The centre of the disturbance was located seventy miles south of here in Monterey county. The first and sharpest shock was of four degrees maximum on the seismograph.

The city that met today's shocks is vastly different from the frame and brick city that was largely destroyed in the 1906 earthquake and fire. Steel frame construction, which proved practically immune from earthquake damage in 1906, is today the rule.

National business corporations in the telephone, oil, railroad and financial fields have not hesitated to put up office buildings that in at least three instances reach a height of from twenty-two to twenty-six stories, and one building of thirty stories is now under construction. Architects and builders have profited from previous earthquakes and believe they have overcome earthquake risk in designing steel frame buildings. Similarly, a repetition of the disastrous breaking of water mains in 1906 has been overcome by construction of a duplicate high pressure system.

It was estimated that the monetary damage in San Francisco will hardly exceed $1,000. The tremors were taken lightly by the populace after the alarm caused by the first two jolts, and by noon they had almost ceased to be a topic of conversation.

Observatory Record

Records of the earthquakes which rocked the central coast section of California this morning were made by the seismographs at the Gonzales Heights Observatory here. The records of the two most severe series of shocks started at 4:35 a.m. and 5:39:20 a.m., respectively. Mr. E. Napier Denison, superintendent of the observatory, who said the records indicated the disturbance was in that part of the continent from which later dispatches brought news of the quakes, described the shock as severe.

Inquiry at Gonzales Observatory last night elicited the reply that no further shocks had been recorded on the instrument there.

Canada's Apple Crop Less Than Estimated

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Canada's commercial apple crop shows a further drop and is now estimated at eighty-five per cent, or 2,333,400 barrels, as compared with 2,833,400 barrels in 1925. This announcement is made in a fruit and vegetable report issued tonight by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

A British Columbia estimate of 3,625,000 boxes is confirmed, and it is possible the total pack will over-run this figure.

LONDON, Oct. 22 (By George Hambleton).—Negotiations are still proceeding for the settlement of the Pacific cable dispute with representatives of Canada, Australia and New Zealand meeting daily. Confidence is expressed that a satisfactory agreement will be reached.

Civil Servants Approve Of Salary Revision

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Recommendations of a fourth class of grade stenographers, whose salaries would range from $1,500 to $1,800 per year, be provided for, the Civil Service Federation of Canada, at the concluding session of their twelfth convention today, approved of the report of the committee on salary revision, which recommends a general increase to all full-time civil servants.

POLICY FOR POLICE FORCE IS OPPOSED

MIL. ANDREW MCGAVIN ANNOUNCES CANDIDATURE FOR POLICE COMMISSION

Too Much Interference With Policies of Long Standing

Following close upon the withdrawal of Mr. James Adam as a candidate for the City Police Commission, Mr. Andrew McGavin, of 159 George Street, has stepped into the breach, assuming a three-cornered fight with Commissioner Stenland and Mr. Walter Hall the other candidates.

In announcing his candidature yesterday, Mr. McGavin said that he stood for no directing of the policy of the police by the commission. "There is too much interference with the discretion of the police force. The policy is changed too often. No sooner have the police settled themselves to working under one policy than a new one crops up. Best results can only be gained by allowing the police to use their own discretion."

It is what has made the English police forces so reliable. They are allowed to use their own discretion in handling cases. We laymen have no right to tell a policeman how to run his own business. We can only handle situations as they arise. Our police force is tied hand and foot by policies laid down by police commissioners, who know little of the actual operations of the police department and the various circumstances that have to be overcome not only by the police but by the community.

Mr. McGavin went on to say that he was sympathetic towards the policemen's effort to secure a pension for their old age. "A fund of this kind is urgently needed," he said. "Men who have given the best years of their life in the service of public safety, endangering their own lives frequently, and reach an age where they are no longer of any value to the municipality except in an advisory capacity should be taken care of. It would be a disgrace to embark on a long standing to make way for younger blood."

Safety zoning of the city was a movement that no one could refuse to support, Mr. McGavin stated, and if elected he would work to the best of his ability to further the zoning of the city for the safety of pedestrians and motorists alike.

Mr. McGavin has been a resident of this city for the past twenty-seven years and has at all times been interested in matters concerning public welfare. He has been in business for the past thirteen years, and is well known in automobile circles, being in the tire business.

Education Council May Be Held in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—Vancouver is to have the opportunity to entertain the fourth conference of the National Council of Education in April, 1928, according to Major J. Ney, of Winnipeg, representing the council, who, following a conference with Provincial educational authorities at Victoria, was in Vancouver today to form a laymen's committee to consider the proposal to bring the conference here.

The 1928 conference of the Council, he stated, will be of greater importance than any conference that has gone before in two senses. It will mark the consideration of adjustments to the educational requirement of modern civilization in Canada, and it will bring to Vancouver, if this city accepts the responsibility, the leading thought of the East to meet with the educators of the West in discussion of our new-world problems.

Fast Steamers Planned On Australian Route

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Imperial Conference is to consider proposals for the construction of seven speed steamers for the England-Australia route to bring beef here in competition with Argentina, which now supplies more than two-thirds of the products consumed in England. The vessels, equipped with the latest refrigerating machinery, would make the run between Fremantle and Southampton in twenty-two days, or ten days quicker than the present service.

The promoters plan a company capitalised at £11,000,000, backed by a group under Sir James Connolly, former Agent-General in London for Western Australia. The proposals have been approved by the Australian Government.

SMITTEN ISLAND REPORTS AT LAST

Isle of Pines Has Thirty-Two Killed and More Than Hundred Injured—Word Comes After Forty-Eight Hours

INUNDATIONS WORK HARM IN STORM PATH

All Forces of Government Are Working Strenuously to Relieve Suffering—Bahama Islands Suffer Little

HAVANA, Oct. 22.—The Isle of Pines was severely ravaged by the Caribbean storm of Wednesday, thirty-two persons being killed, among them sixteen Americans, and about 100 injured.

This was the startling news brought to Havana this afternoon after more than forty-eight hours without word from the Isle of Pines, which lies about thirty-five miles south of Cuba. From all the sections of Cuba affected by the storm reports came in today that added to the steadily mounting list of dead and injured. It is now estimated that more than 600 persons were killed, about 1,600 injured and more than 6,500 families were made homeless.

It has been estimated that the losses in money total nearly $100,000,000.

Many towns front which meagre news came today appear to have been completely wrecked, among them are Baines, San Antonio, Del Rio Blanco, Cuira de Melena, Amalala, Cuafro Caminos, Gabriel, Batabano, and on the Isle of Pines, Santa Fe, Santa Barbara and San Francisco.

Inundations Everywhere

Throughout the area affected, high water seems to have done almost as much damage as the hurricane. With the path of the storm officially reported to have been from the Isle of Pines, through Batabano, and on the north coast to the Gulf of Mexico, every village in that path from which word has come tells of inundations of a part or the whole.

The story of the destruction wrought on the Isle of Pines was told by three Americans and a Cuban newspaperman when they reached the capital this afternoon. They left New Orleans, Isle of Pines, Thursday afternoon, and the latter, a total Colon with fifty-two graves in the capital, which is about forty miles south of Havana, said today, and they then came here to seek aid.

FRENCH COMMITTEE WANTS ASSURANCES

Restatement of Washington Debt Agreement Is Recommended If Requests Are Granted

PARIS, Oct. 22.—M. Adrien Laroche, chairman of the special debt committee of the Chamber of Deputies, has concluded his report on the debt question, which will be presented to the finance committee of the Chamber next Wednesday.

The report is a voluminous document covering 101 typewritten pages. It makes no outright recommendation to ratification by Parliament of the Berenger-Mellon accord, but the arguments are presented in such a manner as to leave no doubt in the mind of the reader that M. Laroche is opposed to ratification of the agreement as it now stands.

"I am not hostile to the principle of the ratification of the agreement signed by France," M. Laroche told a correspondent for the Associated Press, "but we must be safeguarded against the future. It is assurance given by the United States for the creation of an international commission composed of financiers, bankers and experts from all countries interested, and if this commission were entrusted with the task of adjusting differences arising between the governments and to stipulate upon each side the future, I would not hesitate to recommend unrestricted ratification."

Mr. Laroche said that he had been misquoted when he was reported as saying that the debt question must be referred to the League of Nations.

Sir Harry Lauder Is On This Side Atlantic

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Sir Harry Lauder, Scotch humorist and singer, returned to America today on the Aquitania after an absence of two years with the name "daisy" and the same "boss." The daisy and boss were Lady Lauder, who accompanied him, and a Glangarry and his old pair of octagonal spectacles, told ship reporters he will make a concert tour, going as far as Omaha.

"This is the first time I've been coming to America," he said.

Kingsford Papers Are To Be Consolidated

KINGSTON, Oct. 22.—A newspaper deal of considerable importance was consummated today when Mr. H. H. Muir, of London, Ont., purchased control of the Kingston Standard and completed a consolidation with The British Whig, in which latter newspaper Mr. Rupert Davies owns a controlling interest.

The deal, which will take over the two papers on December 1 and issue them under a joint name. Until that date the papers will continue as at present.

MR. JAMES ADAM TO SEEK OFFICE

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN DECIDES TO ENTER ALDERMANIC RACE HERE

Return of Mayor Carl Pendray for Third Term by Acclamation Generally Conceded

Mr. James Adam, prominent business man and one of the most popular and highly-respected of Victoria's citizens, will be a candidate for aldermanic seat on the City Council at the annual municipal election in December next.

Mr. Adam said last night that he had been urged to run by electors for both the City Council and the Police Commission. In view of the fact that the majority of persons who approached him had asked him to enter the aldermanic contest, he has decided to stand for the City Council.

This is Mr. Adam's first entry into the civic arena here, although he has always taken an active interest in affairs of the community and has particularly been engaged in promoting the welfare of athletics in the city.

In addition to being identified with various branches of sport, Mr. Adam has for a lengthy time been an active member of the Rotary Club of Victoria, having filled various offices, including that of president during the 1923-24 term. Well-known in business circles, Mr. Adam is proprietor of the Knickerbocker Hotel at the corner of Fort and Cook Streets.

The decision of Mr. Adam to enter the aldermanic contest brings the number of candidates seeking the five seats on the City Council up to six. Aldermen P. H. Brown, W. H. Cullen, B. L. Clearburn and J. A. Shanks are all standing for re-election for a two-year term, while Mr. H. O. Littlefield, who has served on the City School Board for the past four years, is also in the field for a seat on the Council. The latter is retiring from the School Board.

No opposition has as yet developed to the return of Mayor Carl Pendray for a third term as Victoria's chief magistrate. The aldermanic contest, however, is expected to be one of the most interesting of the year.

Mr. Adam's return to the city is a welcome one, as he has been a valuable asset to the community during his absence. He is expected to take up his residence in the city soon.

B.C. Timber Firms Are To Enter Huge Merger

Vancouver Province Reports That Several of the Larger Provincial Mills Are Inclined to Reply Favorably to Invitation

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—The Vancouver Daily Province today published the following in its news column:

Merger of the timber interests and plants of several of the largest British Columbia sawmilling concerns into a giant syndicate—the deal involving $400,000,000—is forecast in negotiations which are under way in Vancouver. It is said to be one of the biggest mergers ever attempted in the lumber industry in the Pacific Northwest. Leading British Columbia mills have been invited to join the amalgamation, which includes many plans and timber holdings in Washington and Oregon. Several of the larger British Columbia mills are favorably inclined according to report, and it is stated that from twenty-five to thirty-three per cent of the industry is likely, eventually, to accept the terms offered by the purchasing syndicate.

One company, operating four plants on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island, is said to have decided on a sale, and two other large concerns are showing a disposition to follow suit.

Promoters

In Washington and Oregon, a great number of the mills have already closed the agreements. In all, seventy different interests have been invited to sell their holdings, which are estimated at an aggregate value of $300,000,000, and to reorganize the industry as operating or timber-owning individual units. Men behind the merger are of the highest standing in the lumber industry. The prime movers include C. D. Johnson, of the Pacific Spruce Corporation, with headquarters at Portland; E. C. Grigg, of the St. Paul and Tacoma Lumber Co.; James Tyson, a lumber operator in a large way; R. E. Danaher, who is financially interested in the Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., Oregon, and in the pine regions of the Pacific Northwest.

VANCOUVER PORT LACKS TONNAGE

More Than Five Million Bushels of Grain in Stock and en Route, and Less Than Million Booked to Move Soon

DEMAND IS MADE FOR PERMIT SYSTEM AGAIN

Capacity of Terminals Is Nominally More Than Six Million Bushels, But Drying of Damp Wheat Uses Space

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—At a conference here today between representatives of the Board of Harbor Commissioners, the Board of Trade and the Merchants' Exchange, demand for the institution of permit system for controlling shipments of grain to this port in the next few months was decided upon.

Statistics placed before the conference showed the following conditions to prevail. The C.P.R. has 4,467,000 bushels of grain in transit here, and the C.N.R., 1,275,000; stocks in elevators total 2,000,000 bushels; about 425,000 bushels of grain are being loaded daily for Vancouver; tonnage is booked to move only 100,000 bushels before the end of October and another 1,000,000 bushels in November.

Capacity of the port is nominally 6,400,000 bushels, but with the large quantity of damp wheat requiring drying in the elevators, this capacity is reduced appreciably. Much of the grain in transit belongs to the wheat pool and is not booked for early loading.

TIME IS REQUIRED TO ACCOMPLISH BUSINESS

France-German Accord Cannot at Once Be Translated Into Detailed Agreements

PARIS, Oct. 22.—M. Briand, Foreign Minister, and Herr von Hoesch, German ambassador, had their first interview today since the ambassador returned from Berlin, and they assured each other that their governments are just as desirous of coming to a working agreement as they were at the now famous luncheon at Thoiry.

It was at the Thoiry meeting, immediately after Germany was admitted to membership in the League of Nations that M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann, German Foreign Secretary, succeeded in laying down a basis for agreement between the two countries not only on all problems existing between them directly, but on all problems in which they may be mutually concerned.

No concrete proposals were submitted at today's meeting. Both M. Briand and Herr von Hoesch are understood to have agreed that much progress already has been made toward getting approval of public opinion of both countries of the tentative accord reached at Thoiry. They likewise agreed that it would be wise, while continuing the examination of outstanding questions, to make it a let time to do its work in building up a sympathetic atmosphere. Diplomatic circles point out that the work of drawing up detailed agreements for bettering the relations between Germany and France and deciding what mutual concessions will prove most fruitful in appearing public opinion in both countries will take a long time, and the French public opinion must not expect results too quickly.

The French, before committing themselves, for example, to any arrangement whereby the occupation of the Rhineland would be given up in return for immediate financial aid from Germany, naturally want all phases of the question examined by their technical experts from military and economic viewpoints.

Old Confidence Game Is Worked Once More

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—Reginald Blaker, believed to have come here from Shanghai, this afternoon reported to the city police that he had been swindled out of $25,000.

According to Blaker, when en route to this port, he became friendly with a fellow passenger. On arrival here he was walking downtown with this friend when they came across a wallet filled with valuable securities. While inspecting the purse, reported Blaker, the alleged owner came along and claimed his property.

As a reward for finding the wallet the owner agreed to allow Blaker and his friend to join in a scheme to make large profits on the stock market.

Blaker asserted to the police that this morning he paid $25,000 to his partners to cover their "margin" in certain transactions. Since then he has been unable to find the whereabouts of any of his "friends."

At Conference Meeting Premiers Deal With Question of Inter-Imperial Trade

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(Cable from George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent of Canadian Press.)—The newspaper cartoonists are finding considerable humor in the round of entertainment provided for the Dominion premiers. One cartoon represents Premier King and the others dining imperially, with John Bull serving sixty dinners and 147 lunches. The Prime Ministers are depicted as growing fatter and fatter until the collapse. John Bull then calls a taxicab.

LORD BIRKENHEAD TALKS UPON INDIA

HE SKETCHES PICTURE OF THAT COUNTRY PLAYING GREATER PART IN EMPIRE

He Forecasts Day When It Will Assume Status of Self-Governing Dominion at Conference

LONDON, Oct. 22 (Cable from George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—The Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, tonight sketched a picture of a new India playing a greater part in the affairs of the British Empire. He forecast the day when the chief representative of India at Imperial conferences would not be the Secretary for India, but an Indian statesman.

"If we were to leave India tomorrow," Lord Birkenhead declared, "India would dissolve into anarchy. We have no intention of leaving India tomorrow. We know our responsibility in that country. We recognize the great part India has played and will continue to play, in the commonwealth of nations. We look forward to the day when she will discharge worthily her obligations, and I shall not be here speaking on behalf of India. We look forward to the day when India assumes the full status enjoyed by Canada, South Africa and other parts of the Empire."

Lord Birkenhead was speaking at a dinner given the Dominion Premiers attending the Imperial Conference in Old Guildhall. The Canadian Prime Minister spoke of the Empire as a community of communities. In the Empire, he said, "was a measure of liberty and justice not equalled under any other system of government in the world."

The text of their speeches will not be available probably until the weekend, but Premier Mackenzie King, it is understood, intimated that his Government, in view of plans for the extension and maintenance of Canadian exports to Great Britain, outlined the trade agreements concluded with Australia and West Indies, and reviewed generally the course of trade between Canada and other portions of the Empire. The Canadian Prime Minister also commented on the use of moving picture films, the question of which was introduced to the Conference by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister. Mr. King thought the use of United States films in Empire countries would lessen with time, and that British and Dominion films would become increasingly popular.

Industrial Census

Premier Stanley Bruce proposed today what amounts to an industrial census of the Empire. His idea is that inquiry be made as to where the Empire products originate and where they are sold.

New York Women Repudiate Use of Their Names as Patronesses of Sunday Performances

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The New York World says. Many persons prominent in New York society have repudiated the use of their names as patrons or patronesses of Sunday performances Sunday night at the Metropolitan Opera House to honor Queen Marie. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt are among others named by The World who declined to be associated with the benefit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Queen Marie of Rumania tonight failed to make her scheduled radio address from twenty-one stations in a national hook-up.

David Barnoff, vice-president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, said that a misunderstanding as to the time of the address caused the cancellation of the programme.

Kootenay Teachers Are Meeting in Nelson

NELSON, Oct. 22.—Public school teachers of Kootenay and Boundary to the number of 170, are in session in Nelson. Principal S. McArthur, of Central School, Nelson, accused fond managers of representing the natural development of their children and keeping them infantile in mind, even to adulthood. Another dangerous regression was the teacher, "As teachers don't we sometimes forget that we are children three snowballs and broke windows; didn't wash our necks?" he asked.

Mother—Willie, don't you think it rather extravagant to be eating butter and jam on your bread at the same time?

Willie—No, it's economy. You see, the same piece of bread does for both.

LORD ELGIN CONTRASTS TYPES OF EDUCATION

German's Trust Will of State as Primary; British Take Will of Individual as Basis

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—Describing true education as "instilling knowledge calculated to bring out individual worth and thus create good citizenship," the Earl of Elgin delivered an interesting address on "The Influence of Nationality," before a joint luncheon of the Men's and Women's Canadian Clubs at Hotel Vancouver, this afternoon. His Lordship was accompanied by Lady Elgin, to whom Mrs. W. A. Clarke, on behalf of the Women's Canadian Club, presented a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Lord Elgin, in opening, expressed gratification at the warmth of welcome Lady Elgin and he had received while in the Dominion. He always felt a peculiar attraction toward Canada in view of the fact that his father was born in Montreal, when another Lord Elgin was Governor-General of the Dominion. For three generations, he said, the family of Elgin had been closely associated with the Dominion.

While touring on behalf of the National Council of Education, Lord Elgin continued, he hoped to learn rather than teach while traveling over Canada.

Turning to the subject of education, he said the modern trend was not so much to force, or cram children with learning, but rather to draw out the individual to the point where he will make the best of his opportunity.

National Modes
Regarding nationality, every nation, he said, has a different mode of expression, and to these national characteristics were largely attributed the educational system of the country considered. There will be different methods obtaining in Britain and Germany, and the results of each. The German system stamps the citizen in a peculiar mould and teaches patriotism, instilling the sentiment that national duties must be performed because the state says it is right and proper.

In Britain and throughout the Empire, the system is vastly different. British nations strive through education to bring out the best qualities of citizenship throughout the Empire, while in the individual, realizing that loyalty and patriotism will result as a matter of development.

He emphasized the need for education systems throughout the Empire which aimed at building up character.

NEXT WEEK PREMIERS STATE THEIR VIEWS

Foreign Policy Will Then Be Theme—Utterances Probably Not To Be Public

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(Cable from George Hamilton, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press)—It is not until next week that the premiers of the Dominions will state their views on foreign policy. Whether, like the statement of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, they will be regarded as entirely confidential, has not yet been decided. But it is likely that publication will be withheld for the time being. The view is rather widely held that premature publication would be likely to prevent subsequent agreement, as when a speech has been published, a delegate is less likely to work out a compromise.

The experience of some of the dominions with League of Nations mandates show that they are not without their own little troubles.

Mr. H. G. Perry, member of the Legislature for Fort George riding in the city. He has come to Victoria for the purpose, he says, of taking up a few matters connected with his district with the various departments of the Government. He had been in Vancouver on private business, and decided to come to Victoria to attend to a few matters relative to his constituency before returning home.

He says that the mills in his district are all working, and the situation throughout the riding is in consequence very good.

With respect to the location of the big pulp mill at Prince George, which has been promised for a long time, Mr. Perry says it appears as quite likely that a start will be made in connection with the proposal. There are indications that the Government is ready to carry out his threat with an axe, it is charged. Queen will be examined by an alienist.

NEW GLASGOW, N.S., Oct. 22.—Queen Ling, a fifty-five-year-old Chinese, arrested yesterday on a charge of assaulting her brother with an axe, declared that he had loaned his brother $1,800 "some 193 years ago," and repeated efforts to get it back had failed. His brother, George Ling, with whom he had conducted a truck farm near here, said that early today Queen had demanded repayment of the money loaned "a century ago" and declared that he would kill him and his family if the money was not forthcoming. Later in the day Queen started to carry out his threat with an axe, it is charged. Queen will be examined by an alienist.

Miss Carson, Injured In Fall, Is Reported Resting Comfortably

MISS Ethel Carson, a cashier at the Empress Hotel, who suffered severe injuries to her spine, resulting from a fall at Nootka, on the West Coast, was reported by the St. Joseph's Hospital authorities last evening to be resting comfortably. Her spinal column is injured, and it will be some days before her condition can be expected to show any marked improvement. Dr. Cyril W. Brown, attending her, said that the fall occurred when she fell down a ravine. Friends arriving at the spot found her partially paralyzed. She was placed aboard the Princess Maquinna at Nootka, and brought down to Victoria for medical attention.

Roads leading out of Havana still are choked with fallen trees and debris, and considerable difficulty is being met by relief workers trying to reach the injured.

The lack of wire communication is also adding to the difficulties, although communication with a few places has been established by the use of the wireless equipment of the cruiser Cuba.

Relief Work

All the forces of the government are working strenuously to relieve suffering. Lines of trucks left this morning for the interior with cargoes of supplies. To protect the people a presidential decree has been issued regulating the prices of foodstuffs and necessary articles.

Havana itself is rapidly assuming its normal aspect.

The famous race course at Oriental Park was partly wrecked. Many horses were killed, among them a few which only recently arrived from the United States. The residences of a number of Americans at Mariacao are reported to have suffered damage. It is believed that many members of crews lost their lives when their vessels were sunk or dashed against the rocks in Havana Harbor. So far twenty-four bodies have been taken from the bay.

Bahamas Little Damaged

NASSAU, Bahamas, Oct. 22.—Nassau and the northern island of New Providence in the Bahamas group weathered the latest tropical hurricane with no reported fatalities and small property damage.

Favorable advices from several stations in the path of the storm were received last night and today by the government station here after communication had been re-established.

Bimini escaped with little loss. Nassau and the island of New Providence, seat of the Colonial government, was not hit badly.

of California, and Charles R. Keith, president of the Oregon Lumber Co., which owns the second largest mill on the continent.

Valuators Appointed

Valuators have already been appointed to appraise the assets of companies entering the merger, and three men of national reputation in the lumber business have been named as a board of arbitration in case of disagreement on transfer prices.

Under the consolidation it is proposed to take over and purchase out right sawmills and manufacturing plants, timber holdings, logging railroads, steamship lines and terminal distributing yards located from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Terms of purchase provide for more plants and assets on the basis of sixty per cent cash and the balance in stock or bonds in the new corporation.

The distressed condition of the lumber industry throughout the entire Northwest during the past three years is said to be the reason for consolidation, so many separate companies are operating that the keen competition, it is claimed, has cut prices below a margin where it is possible to make any profit.

A Vancouver lumberman who is closely connected with the merger negotiations, and who has just returned from Chicago, where he attended a number of conferences held by the promoters of the new corporation, states that the situation in the industry is similar to what existed in the steel business in the United States before the U.S. Steel Corporation was formed.

That corporation, by joining a number of companies under one administration, closing down unprofitable plants, and increasing production, brought new life to the steel trade and so developed it that today it is on a highly profitable basis.

"GHOST" GIRL'S CASE TO BE INVESTIGATED

Psychical Powers Which Have Been Manifest for Year Being Considered From Asylum

LONDON, Oct. 22.—A thirteen-year-old girl who is a sort of real-life Alice of Wonderland is in London, and British scientists are investigating her case.

She is Eleonore Zugan, who has a reputation as a poltergeist—"merry ghost"—medium.

Here are a few of the strange happenings which are to be investigated:

1. Raps on furniture.
2. The disappearance and reappearance of objects, which are sometimes "lost" for weeks.

3. The sudden displacement of pins and needles, which are found buried in Eleonore's hands or arms.

Eleonore is the daughter of Rumanian peasants, and when her psychical powers were first manifested, a year or so ago, she was taken to a home for the insane.

Countess "Good Fairy"

The Countess of Wasseleko-Serecki heard of her, and after much difficulty persuaded her relatives to let her come home and more or less adopted her. The Countess brought Eleonore to London.

Mr. Harry Price, of the Psychical Research Society, who has seen some of Eleonore's "manifestations" in the Countess's flat in Vienna, told a Standard representative today that they were most extraordinary.

"I had the girl under close observation for three days," he said, "and by suitable precautions eliminated any element of fraud."

"Once, when the girl, the Countess and myself were in the door of a room a stiletto from a far corner hurled itself across the room and buried itself in the door near us."

"On another occasion two pieces of dress material disappeared from the hands of the girl and the Countess when they were actually engaged in making a garment. No one saw the material any more, just vanished, and a thorough search of the flat failed to reveal the mystery. It has not been found since."

Frequent "Moods"

"Coins disappear from men's waistcoat pockets, chessmen have vanished after being carefully put away in a box, and once a clothes brush dropped from apparently nowhere into the midst of a room in the Countess's flat."

Eleonore was born at Talpa, Rumania, and possesses the usual peasant attributes. She is inclined to be stubborn and often has "moods."

Vancouver Grocer Is Robbed of Small Sum

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—Two young masked and armed bandits held up John Price, grocer, Garden Drive, tonight, robbed the cashier of $20 and escaped in an automobile. One of the men flourished a revolver, while the other took the cash.

Nun Released From Vows After Twenty-Five Years

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Oct. 22.—Miss Anna Lebruns, of New Bedford, twenty-five years a nun, was released from her vows six months ago. Today she is making preparations for her marriage to Sergeant Frank Levesque, U.S.A., Ft. Humphrey, Va. They met first when she was sixteen and he was twenty-one. A few months later she entered the Gray Nunnery in Montreal to become a Sister of Charity. She saw Sergeant Levesque once in the twenty-five years she wore the veil, when she was permitted to go to the bedside of a dying relative.

Ottawa Drawing-Room To Be Held in January

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Vice-countess Willingdon will hold a drawing-room early in January. Announcement to this effect was made from Government House today.

It isn't very often that Laura La Plante, the plump film star, holds up production, but the other day she was late, very late, indeed.

"What was the matter?" demanded her director.

"Well," said Laura, "when I got up this morning I felt like a lanky rod."

"I don't get you."

"I needed a shingle," laughed Laura.

Cheap Cosmetics May Be Harmful

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 22.—Charging that cheap cosmetics often poison their users, Dr. S. Dana Hubbard, chairman of a committee on patent medicine supervision, Bureau of Food and Drugs, New York, recommended to the American Public Health Association today that proper legislation be passed governing the sales of face powders, hair dyes, lotions, creams and freckle removers.

Dr. Hubbard said that at the present time individuals without conscience can and do offer for sale chemical irritants and poisons without fear of control or supervision by public officials. He named lead, arsenic, mercury, wood alcohol and coal tar dyes as drugs which have been permitted to enter into the composition of many preparations and which menace the health of users.

BISHOP ROWE SPEAKS IN CITY

ADDRESSES MONTHLY MEETING OF WOMAN'S AUXILIARY OF COLUMBIA DIOCESE

Active Programme Faces Members in Evening Two Months—Lantern Lecture to Be Given

Bishop Rowe, of Alaska, paid a fine tribute to the two Bishops of the Canadian Church adjacent to his diocese at the meeting of the Columbia Woman's Auxiliary to the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada, held yesterday in the Memorial Hall.

Two Famous Prelates
Speaking of Bishop Slinger, who he described as a fine leader and a heroic man, also of the late Archbishop Du Veret, he told of the far-reaching effects of their work among the Eskimo and Indians of the Far North. In essence the methods of the Episcopal Church of the United States and of the Anglican Church of Canada are similar, in ministering to the suffering bodies of men, women and children in hospitals, and in education and religious training along constructive lines, in all of which the Women's Auxiliaries of both churches have materially assisted.

Report on Dominion Board
Mrs. Dickson, lately returned from the annual meeting of the Dominion Board, gave a very interesting report of the various matters considered at the meeting. An outstanding feature had been the wonderful progress made in the work of Christianizing the Jews during recent years. Never before have the Jews been so ready to listen to the teachings of Christ, even the action of the Soviet Government in Russia in repealing oppressive laws against them has worked favorably for their liberty of thought and action.

G. McCreel, of Petrolia, President of the Association.

Bishop Returns
A very hearty welcome was given to Bishop Schofield, who had just returned from the East, and who expressed his pleasure to find the Women's Auxiliary working energetically for the New Cathedral Building Fund, which has been largely augmented during his absence.

The noon hour address was given by Archbishop Laxcock, taking as his subject the fine spirit of forgiveness shown at the League of Nations convention, when the delegates from Germany were welcomed by twenty-five nations of the world, including France. The results of the prayers of God's people are now showing in the reconciliation of old-time enemies, and God is working His purposes out for the peace of the world.

Christianizing Moslems
That the life members' voluntary offering should be devoted to supplying Christian literature to Moslems was the suggestion made by Miss Turner, following the reading of an earnest appeal for help along these lines from the Archbishop of Canterbury at the recent great convention in London.

During the absence of Miss Turner for the next three months, Miss Nina Hill was appointed to act as secretary of the life members' voluntary offering, and to her contributions should be sent. Rev. A. P. Chadwick, who was accompanied by the Rev. Buol Ding Li, of the Good Hope Mission, requested the members of the W.A. to attend a special service of holy communion at St. John's Church on Sunday next at 8 a.m., when the celebrant will be the Chinese priest, Rev. Buol Ding Li.

Sale of Work
The following notices of sales of work and other activities were given out at the meeting: St. Mary's, Oak Bay, silver tea, October 28; St. Alban's, Oaklands district, the Girls' W.A. will hold a silver tea and sale of work at Friday, October 29, at 3 p.m.; St. Mary's J.W.A., silver tea on November 6; St. John's W.A., a donation party, November 9; St. Matthias, Pout Bay, a sale of work, November 12; St. Mary's (evening branch), sale of work, November 13; St. Paul's, Esquimalt, jubilee sale of work, November 17; St. Luke's, Cedar Hill, sale of work, December 1.

Local Man Learns Of Success Upon Attaining Majority

A PLEASANT celebration of his coming of age greeted Mr. Nelson John Smith, of Esquimalt, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith, reside at 502 Cook Street, when the information was published in The Colonist yesterday of his success in winning a commercial certificate of proficiency in radio telegraphy, first class, issued by the Federal authorities.

Mr. Smith took a great interest in radio here, and his parents are glad to learn that he is formally recognized as proficient.

Mr. R. L. Young, of this city, was the other Island candidate to secure the first class commercial certificate.

Christ Church Cathedral, missionary bazaar, December 3.

On Wednesday, October 27, a lantern lecture will be given by Miss Eva Haasell on her caravan work in the Cathedral Memorial Hall, at 8 p.m. The meeting considered an appeal on behalf of a young crippled boy for a radio set to relieve the hours of tedium and suffering, and the coat was voted from the extra cent a day fund, from which two other appeals were assisted. The Christmas cheer and gifts for missions on Vancouver Island were requested by the Dorcas secretary, to be sent in by December 1, so that they can be packed and shipped on December 3. The November meeting will be held at St. Saviour's Parish Hall, Victoria West, on November 19, by the kind invitation of the Parochial W.A. Members were reminded of the lecture to be given by Rev. H. PROVINCIAL COURT HAS BUSY SESSION

Fines Imposed on Nine Hunters, Violators of the Game Act—Two Other Convictions

In a busy session of the Provincial Police Court yesterday, Magistrate George Jay imposed fines totaling $155 on violators of the Game Act. No fewer than nine hunters came under the penalty of the law.

James Saunders was charged with hunting without the necessary licence and was fined the sum of $10. Burgess Reed was fined $15 for having a pump-gun in his possession. George Lapp, charged with discharging firearms without a licence paid the court a fine of $25. He was also fined an additional $10 for trying to hinder a constable in the performance of his duties.

Accused of discharging firearms in the Municipality of Oak Bay, Dr. B. C. Moss and Dr. Stanley F. Miles were each fined $15.

Sam Wing Wo and John Edgar Pough were each fined $10 for failing to have hunting licences. The latter was penalized the sum of $15 for hunting in Oak Bay Municipality. Mrs. Jessie Jane Keys was also fined $15 for hunting in that district. Edmond Woodward was fined $10 for failing to have a hunting licence. He was also fined $15 for carrying a loaded gun in his car.

For failure to give notice of registration to the Superintendent of Provincial Police of the sale of a car, the B.C. Motor Exchange was fined $15. Jim Lee, charged with failure to produce a driver's licence on the demand of a police officer was fined $5.

VICTORIA CONSERVATIVES

The Victoria Conservatives have chosen their roster of officers for the ensuing year, a year which promises to be fraught with interesting developments in the fortunes of the party. The new president of the local association is Mr. D. B. Plunkett, of whom it may be said unquestionably that he is heart and soul in the battle for victory of the Conservative cause at the polls. Mr. Plunkett is an ardent worker always at the task, and he is gifted with sound common sense and the faculty of working harmoniously with his colleagues. He recognizes that in consolidating organization all round co-operation is essential. He will seek this in strengthening the cause of the party in this community, and if the feeling exhibited at the annual meeting is any criterion of that which prevails among all Conservatives the work of co-operative effort will be pleasant and profitable.

The association's year just closed saw two Federal general elections, and in both Victoria Conservatives showed their unanimity. In this connection a word of cordial praise is due to Mr. Lindley Crease, who was president of the local association for the period mentioned. He performed the duties of that office always with tact and discretion; won many new friendships and cemented others which he had made during the long years. The present strength of the Conservative Party here undoubtedly owes something to the character and principles of Mr. Crease. He fulfilled the office of president of the local association admirably and set an example which calls for emulation in the years to come.

The task of the Conservatives here, as throughout the Province, is to redouble their efforts in the way of organization. It rests with themselves entirely to say if out of their party the next Government of British Columbia will be constituted. The Province is Conservative at heart. What the party needs is virile leadership, a sound platform and intensive organization. These three considerations will cement loyalty to its fortunes. There is no reason that we know of, granted the putting into effect of the policies named, why the Conservatives of British Columbia should not be as strong proportionately in the Provincial Legislature as they are in their representation in the Federal House of Commons.

HUDSON BAY RAILWAY

The Prairie members of Parliament who will support the Government of Mr. Mackenzie King, and without whom he would have no Government at all, will, undoubtedly, demand their pound of flesh in the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway. There is a pre-election promise to this effect and a dispatch which recently appeared in a Saskatoon paper intimates that a decision has already been reached—before even Parliament has been consulted—to construct another eighteen miles during the Fall and early Winter. The story is further developed to say that Port Nelson will be the terminus and if the decision about construction is right that may be taken for granted for the work is to be carried out from Kettle Rapids to the Limestone, and Kettle Rapids is the last point from which a diversion to Port Churchill would be practicable.

Some millions of the public funds have already been sunk in Port Nelson in order that it may justify its name of being a port. The results have been largely nugatory. There is so much shallow water at Port Nelson that it is necessary to move the port out to sea. It will require an expenditure of many millions to make it a port, and all these will be spent to satisfy the voters of Manitoba and Saskatchewan because of the support they gave Mr. Mackenzie King. Already $20,000,000 have been sunk in the railway enterprise which is designated to promote overseas trading through Hudson Bay. In this connection the report of Mr. D. W. McLachlan, the departmental engineer at Port Nelson, should prove a better guide to governmental course of action than political considerations. Mr. McLachlan reported: "Though I am not asked to outline a policy for the Government in regard to the Hudson Bay Railway, I feel that even though it should be abandoned as a grain-hauling proposition, it could be made to serve a very useful purpose by a short extension from the present rail-head at Kettle Rapids to the head of navigation on the Nelson River, a distance of 43 miles."

If Mr. McLachlan's advice is followed many millions would be saved to the Canadian taxpayer. It is the grain-exporting project that involves the tremendous expenditure with no possibility of adequate returns. If the Hudson Bay line is completed as the Prairie members wish, then Canada's railway burden, which has been steadily diminishing during the last few years, will be immediately swelled again to large proportions. There will be more interest in loans which the taxpayers must fund. There will be more deficits in operating expenses to be made up by the taxpayers. There will be new expenditures requisite all the time to keep such a project as the Hudson Bay route in operation. The whole weight of expert evidence is against the practicability of the route for grain-hauling purposes, yet in the face of this the supporters of Mr. King insist on an expenditure which must fall on the people of Canada as a whole.

CANADIAN-MADE

Institutional advertising is by no means a new phase of publicity but wherever it has been tried the results have never failed to achieve the object sought. A campaign of this character is now being carried on in the newspapers of the Dominion by General Motors of Canada, Ltd., of Oshawa, the object being to show the benefits which the country as a whole can derive by buying Canadian-made goods. It is a campaign of education being conducted in 92 publications in the country, and, while specifically it is designed to draw attention to the value of the products which come under the head of General Motors, it is none the less in a wider sense an exemplification of that institutional advertising which has for its aim the encouragement of the circulation of money at home rather than sending it to a foreign land.

General Motors are telling us that their is a Canadian institution, staffed by Canadians, employing Canadian workmen and using Canadian materials. The purpose is to sell their products to Canadians through Canadian dealers and to distribute Canadian-made motor cars throughout the British Empire. What these activities mean to the country is readily imagined when it is said that the lumber used is from our own forests, the steel is made in Canadian mills from Canadian ore which is smelted by Canadian foundrymen. The purchases of brass and copper, of wire and glass, of nickel and fabrics, oils and paints, in fact everything which enters into the making of a motor car, are from Canadian sources. The undertaking is therefore an essentially local institution, and that is why its institutional advertising is of high economic value to the community as a whole. General Motors are doing a good work in the campaign for the buying of home products, and setting a sturdy and enterprising example in this sense.

MINORITY GOVERNMENT

The Edmonton Journal has been commenting on the results of the recent provincial elections in Alberta. It points out that 9,900 Conservative votes elected a member; that 6,300 Liberal votes elected a member; that 2,200 Labor votes elected a member and that 1,654 U. F. A. votes elected a member. One U. F. A. voter, it says, had the electing power of four Liberals or five Conservatives. The Liberals and Conservatives between them polled 84,000 votes and elected 11 members. The U. F. A. and Labor Parties polled 82,000 votes and elected 49 members. The Bulletin says: "Any Government which can elect supporters at the rate of 1,654 votes per head, and shut out opponents unless they get 6,000 votes per head, is entitled to all the medals, cups and other tokens of superiority posted or to be posted for competition in the international pastime of winning elections."

A confidential business service forecast published by an agency in the United States has been sent to a number of subscribers in Canada predicting that reciprocity between the two countries has become a possibility again on account of the Liberal victory at the recent election. It says: "The result of closer trade relations with Canada would be improved sales opportunities for United States manufacturers and Canadian raw materials at lower cost." The manufacturers of the United States are therefore already counting the chickens which they expect Mr. Vincent Massey to hatch for them when he becomes Canadian Minister at Washington.

The London Free Press says: "When Mr. King is at the Imperial Conference he will discover, if he is interested, that the Irish Free State actually has a clause in its constitution which forbids the Governor-General to grant a dissolution when facing a vote of censure in the House. If there is any constitutional change in Canada it should be along these lines. However, it is not likely that Canada will hear any more of the constitutional issue. It served its purpose as a vote-getter for the King Government, and having served its purpose it will be relegated to the limbo of forgotten things."

A hopeful note for the progress of humanity is struck by The New York World in saying: "In spite of automobiles, radio, bridge, whist, the movies and other often denounced enemies of reflection, there are still many people in the country who think and who seek the acquaintance of thinkers through the great freemasonry of books."

There is an etiquette, or possibly a health reason, in some aspects of personal hygiene. Dr. Octavia Lewin in a lecture on the subject quotes the following couplet: "Downward look towards your toes when you sneeze or blow your nose."

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

The motor car, a valuable and necessary public convenience and a source of great public pleasure, has increased and multiplied so rapidly that it has become a difficult public problem. The new method of transportation has become so popular in Canada, the United States and Great Britain that it has created a very difficult problem for the older systems of transportation, the ordinary railways and the street railways. It has cut so deeply into the business of both the ordinary railways and the street railways that the governing authorities of some of the countries mentioned are considering whether something cannot be done to put the transportation business on a fairer competitive basis. It is said that the railways and the tramways are heavily taxed for all purposes and are compelled to maintain their property in a certain standard of efficiency, while the motor cars are lightly taxed and the highways which they use are common property and are maintained out of the common purse.

That is one of the problems the popular motor car has created, but it is not the most perplexing of the problems created by the popular motor car. If you are a diligent reader of the columns of the newspapers, you will have noticed that not a day passes without the motor car killing a certain number of people. The bigger the town the larger the number of victims of the motor car. The most distressing feature of the daily mortality tables is the number of children who are run down on the streets and either killed or injured.

A little child in the city of Seattle was sent by its mother to procure a bottle of medicine and was carried home almost immediately in the throes of death. It had been struck by a rushing motor car, and the driver of the machine attempted to flee from the scene of the tragedy. A boy was run down and fatally hurt on the streets of Vancouver a few days ago, and the mother collapsed when the broken body of her son was brought home.

The responsibility for such daily tragedies cannot be charged against the motor car. The problems of the car cannot be solved by outlawing the machine, which has become a public convenience and a business necessity as well as a source of health and pleasure to the masses of the people. The motor car is an institution and cannot be disestablished; but surely something might be accomplished by a general appeal to the driver of the motor car. If every driver of a car could be mentally convinced of the fact that every time he exceeded a certain rate of speed he became a potential actor in a tragedy, such a conviction might have some effect. But the difficulty is that cars are multiplying fast and many new drivers are taking their places at the wheel and the throttle, and the art of driving a motor car without danger to the public can be acquired only by experience.

The management of a railway or tramway system will not put an inexperienced engineer or motorman in charge of a train or car. A systematic course of training is a condition precedent to entering the cab of a locomotive or the vestibule of a street car. Railway trains as a rule run over private property from which the public is excluded. Both railway trains and street cars run upon rails, not at large through the streets. Motor cars are privileged to go anywhere upon the congested traffic of city streets, as well as through the less crowded country roads. They may go at any rate of speed almost, provided the drivers of them can demonstrate that they are not going at such a rate of speed as to endanger the lives of the public.

We were talking to an experienced driver of a high-powered car a few days ago, when the subject of discussion became the increasing dangers upon the streets and highways. The conclusion reached was that nearly all drivers of cars exceed the safety limit of speed nearly all the time because something unexpected may happen at any time. A little child, nurtured in the belief that all human agencies have been created for the purpose of shielding and protecting it from harm, may dart in front of a car at almost any time and in almost any place. Old people are sometimes absent-minded and oblivious to danger, for the motor car is not of their generation.

There is no doubt that the experienced driver was right when he said that nearly all motor drivers exceed the safety speed limit nearly all the time. Anyone who stands for a short time at the corners of some of the streets of Victoria and makes notes of the rate at which the passing cars are driven will reach the same conclusion. If the drivers of the speeding cars were readers of the newspapers and were gifted with even a modicum of imagination, they would drive more carefully, for no person who is at all sensitive can mentally contemplate with complacency the possibility of becoming the chief actor in a tragedy of the streets. The time of the most important person in the world is not of so much consequence that the difference of a minute or two in reaching a given place can justify menace to human life.

quence that the difference of a minute or two in reaching a given place can justify menace to human life.

A NEW ENCYCLOPAEDIA

The tenth volume of the new edition of Chambers' Encyclopaedia is now issued, and it contains much matter of interest. The first article of importance is that on "Pensions." It has been written by Mr. J. S. W. Kipp, and lucid explanations of war pensions and the Contributory Pensions Act of 1925 are given. The volume goes down to "Saco," and in the intervening pages there are many important articles. Among those which will be turned to with particular interest for general information is that on "Relativity." It is contributed by Professor William Peddie, and as a lucid statement of a difficult subject, it leaves nothing to be desired. Other articles of importance are Lord Birkhead on "Protection," "Railways," by E. R. McDermott, and "Radium," by Sir Oliver Lodge. In this volume, as in the others, every subject upon which new knowledge or information is available is brought completely up to date.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Almo Michaels

Tired of the friction of busy years, wearing bright youth away, tired of the victoria bought with tears, triumphs that last but a day! Tired of the seasons' ordered march, blossoming, falling, leaf, rains that quicken and winds that parch, sunlight and storm-cloud brief. Tired of the bars that the world can raise, shutting a soul within; tired of the halting words of praise, stripped of the weight to win! Tired? And yet sensing dimly still conquests that are to be, battling on with a deathless will and a soul that is winged and free. Certain of this: that to some good end still is the struggle staged; meeting with calm what the high gods send, doubting and fear assuaged.

Radial Car Strikes Automobile With Men

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 22.—Nick Andreki, forty-five, of Hamilton, was fatally injured and J. M. Metcalfe, seventy, well-known fruit farmer reading near Winona, received injuries which will probably prove fatal, when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a radial car yesterday.

EUROPE'S OUTLOOK HELD TO BE DARK

PROF. SCOTT NEARING SEES LITTLE HOPE FOR CAPITALISTIC RESTORATION

Treaty Makers Who Mapped Continent After War Blamed for Part in Prospective Disintegration

"Can Capitalistic Europe re-establish itself? This question, asked by Professor Scott Nearing, in addressing a well-attended meeting last evening in the Metropolitan Institute Hall, was in turn answered by him with the statement that the future of Europe would be decided in large measure by the three countries of Great Britain, Germany and Russia.

In dealing with the situation, the speaker recalled the situation in Europe before the war. Germany had built up a most efficient economic machine. It had controlled two-thirds of the iron and coal of Europe. In consequence it was in a position and did control a tremendous business in all lines of manufacture. All Europe was tied up with the economic affairs of Germany.

The war, in the opinion of the speaker, was aimed at breaking that up. The war was fought on both sides, he contended, in order to win an economic battle. France sought to deprive Germany of her position, which was reciprocated on the side of Germany.

Treaty Makers at Fault

When war ended the treaty makers proceeded on wrong principles. They proceeded to remake the map of Europe by rending the economic body.

There were economists in some of the countries who pointed out that this could not be done. They said that the economic body could not be torn up. To do so was to remove the life from it the same as the tearing of flesh. The old-style politicians of Europe, however, persisted. The economic relationships in Europe were destroyed.

"Europe," said the speaker, "is a relationship among railways, mines, manufacturing, coal is not mined in the French or any other language. The same was true of other industries."

"The war was lost all round," said Prof. Nearing. "The economic fabric was destroyed. It has not yet been restored."

Conditions in Germany

Incidentally, he told of his travels in Germany in recent times. He had met the new German type of university student. These men were of a very high type. They were abnormally anti-social. The German standard of living was twenty-five per cent below what it was in 1913, as far as labor classes were concerned. Germany had lost her market, and was being forced to live more cheaply and work harder to live.

Then came the Dawes plan of settlement. Germany would soon be called upon to start paying 2,500,000,000 gold marks annually in indemnities. To do this she will have to sell more goods in competition with Great Britain, France, the United States, and other countries. These other countries will lose correspondingly in this trade and the unemployment must be transferred to these countries outside of Germany.

The food struggle in Germany is desperately hard now. The German worker has to maintain himself in his own country, and bondholders in foreign countries.

"Can Germany carry the load?" he asked. "Can she produce cheaply enough to take the trade away from other countries?" The speaker pointed out, would run for fifty years. "Will Germany labor stand it?" he asked.

For two generations there was placed upon the German workers lower standards of living with increased hours of labor, greater speed and intensity of work.

In pessimistic mood

The German people, he said, were pessimistic. They were regarding conditions as slavery. Germany was desperately poor, and must continue to be so.

An instance of the way in which the conditions work out, the speaker pointed to the fact that German miners were getting only three-fifths the price for their coal. Italy imports all her coal. She formerly imported from Britain. Now with a reduced price charged by Germany she bought there. There are a quarter of a million British unemployed, with little or no chance of getting back.

Premier Baldwin had presented the situation in a frank way when he announced that labor must take its cut to meet the competition of European countries.

When Germany was beaten, the victors said, "let Germany pay." She is paying. The workers of Germany are suffering.

STRATFORD WOMAN

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Stratford, Ontario.—"After my first baby was born I started to work on the tenth day and did a big washing on the twelfth day. Being so young (I was married at 19) I did not know what I was doing, so let it go until I was all run-down, weak and nervous, and had a bad displacement. For nearly two years I could not sleep and I would always complain of having 'not a head-ache, but a brain-ache.' My mother is taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the change of life and she recommended it to me. After taking two bottles I began to get a little sleep and to feel better and I have never left off since then, except for about three months. I can safely say I have taken this medicine since my second baby was born. I think it makes child-birth easier as I had terrible pains with my first three children and very few with my fourth as I was so much stronger. I am now able to do my work alone, but I am still taking the Vegetable Compound as I am nursing my baby."—Mrs. OMER PAUL, 49 Cherry Street, Stratford, Ontario.

If you are suffering from any weakness which causes such symptoms as pains in the side and back and nervous feelings, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial now.

COOK—There passed away yesterday at St. Joseph's Hospital, Mr. John Cook, of 1248 St. David Street, Oak Bay. The deceased was fifty-two years of age and was born in Ontario. Before coming to this city a year ago he resided in Dundee, Manitoba. The late Mr. Cook is survived by his widow, also a sister, Mrs. N. Gill, of Winnipeg; and three brothers, Messrs. Arthur Cook and Stuart Cook, both of Dundee, and Fred Cook, of Edmonton. The remains are resting at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel, whence the funeral has been arranged to take place on Monday next at 2 o'clock, the Rev. W. A. Guy officiating. Interment will be made in the Royal Oak Burial Park.

Vancouver Man Claims $300,000 Invention

JOSEPH W. Saunders, of Vancouver, who a week ago leaped into prominence with the announcement that he had received $300,000 for Canadian rights to a railroad invention, has been arrested on a charge of false pretences. He was alleged to have owned a former lodging-house keeper $14. Saunders is shown above with his bride of a year, examining the "contract."

Police Plan for Another Ball in Aid of Solarium

MAYOR Pendray announced last evening that the police would organize another ball on December 10 at the Empress Hotel for the Solarium funds.

are paying. They are paying also in Great Britain, in France, in Belgium, and elsewhere," said Prof. Nearing.

If the Dawes plan is continued, he said, the standard of living throughout Europe will have to go down to the standard that is forced upon Germany.

Coming to the situation in Great Britain, the speaker said that since March, 1926, the Baldwin Government had spent more time on labor problems than on anything else. The matter is not settled, he said.

Reviewing the incident connected with the general strike, Prof. Nearing said that this event had taught the Labor party that their leaders were nearer to the Tory party than to the actual workers. These constituted leaders of the Labor party had been responsible for calling off the strike just as the strikers were getting well organized for carrying on.

The rank and file of the Labor party were not satisfied, however. They said that they had organized a strike once and they could do it again. The sole system was checked upon when the speaker said that 1,750,000 were living by this system. There were young men of eighteen in the country who had never been employed since they left school at fourteen who lived on dols.

In Great Britain the theory of evolution in constitutional matters found favor. It was advocated that under the British constitution there could be attained the same results by constitutional methods as was attained by revolution.

The general strike which started as a fight between capital and labor ended in a fight between the Government and labor, for the Government took the cause of the capitalist over.

The temper of the Labor movement had changed, however. It was neither MacDonald nor Thomas that led the party now. Cook was the most popular figure in Labor circles in the country.

As an illustration of the situation in Europe, the speaker was keyed on Germany and Great Britain.

The role of the United States, however, was to be considered. Since 1921 the United States had been sending to Europe at the rate of $300,000,000 a year. This went in the form of loans, flotations, and in the purchase of industrial properties there. The United States bankers had probably saved what was called European capital. For two generations European countries would be paying interest to the United States, and so pay tribute to that country, which was the richest country in the world.

The United States banker must be criticized by saying, "Look at the aid we've given you." The European worker said, "Yes, but look what we have to pay."

Situation in Russia

Dealing with the past which Russia played in the matter, Prof. Nearing said that for twelve years Russia, which constituted one-half of Europe, had been cut off from the rest of that continent. The economic life had been destroyed. The granaries of Europe were in Russia; the factories were in the other half of the continent. The men who made treaties, however, made political treaties, not economic ones.

The czar in former days had kept Russia dark, he charged. Referring to his visit to Russia, when he traveled as a private individual and studied the situation there, he said that in the matter of clothing, in food and in many other lines, the workers of Russia were living better than even in Germany or Great Britain. For the past five years Russia was the only country in Europe that had improved from year to year in its conditions. The country was re-establishing with new capital. The railways were in very good shape; new factories were being erected, and conditions generally were better.

In the opinion of the speaker, Soviet Russia was strong because labor was more thoroughly organized. There were hospitals, schools and provision for all kinds of social services that did not exist in other parts of Europe. Attention was given to the fine arts and Shakespeare was played more in Moscow than in London. There was better music in Moscow than in Paris.

In his opinion, economic restoration will continue in Russia. In the other countries of Europe it appeared to him that if the present system was continued, economic disintegration

Judge Orders Fumes And Noise Must Stop

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 22.—Having ruled that the fumes and noise from a foundry and machinery manufacturing shop do constitute a nuisance to Mrs. Eleanor Smith, whose residence is next door, Mr. Justice Ives has issued a mandatory order of the supreme court that the defendant should keep abated the nuisance. Damages of $100 and costs are also allowed. The judgment states that there is no doubt that when the defendant engaged in melting metal and producing fumes occupying force plaintiff to close her windows, and even then they enter her home to her annoyance. And it is equally certain, rules the justice, that the plaintiff is disturbed by the noise.

A Joy Renewed From Day to Day

What pleasure one gets from even a small glass garden! All Winter long it is a place of Summer warmth with Summer's flowers close at hand. Each morning fresh blossoms open, bringing new delights.

A Lord & Burnham glass garden is a joy renewed from day to day. And it's easy to own a glass garden. The prices you will find are quite reasonable. You need not be bothered with building details. If you wish we will take care of the design and construction from start to finish.

Let us send you our beautifully illustrated booklet, picturing many types of glass gardens, each perfectly suited to its surroundings.

TRAFFIC PROBLEM IS PART OF ZONING

Ordered Forethoughts as Applied to Communities, Is Definition of Modern Town Planning

By J. H. DOUGHTY-DAVIES
As a result of my previous article on zoning, several inquiries have been made which call for a fuller explanation of the purpose and scope of town planning and zoning, and its application to Victoria.

The definition of town planning cannot be put into better words than those of Paul Waterhouse—it is "the application to a town of that process of ordered forethought which we habitually apply to individual buildings." The reasonableness of this is obvious, the hindrance to its being put into execution lying in the fact that, whereas the location, size and type of a house can be decided from the first, the same is not possible in the case of a town as a general rule. We have to wait until it has been located and has grown to a reasonable size before we can know sufficient about the industrial possibilities and development potentialities to warrant the expenditure of the necessary time and money.

Parallel in Home
The state of the town or city at this stage is comparable to that of a house comprised of rooms placed without regard to their relationship one to the other, or their accessibility one from the other, together with additions, extensions and lean-tos, partitions, doors in some places, holes knocked through the walls in other places, a furnace upstairs and a bath in the dining-room. All the essentials of a good modern house may be there, but they need a slight rearranging. In the case of a city this rearranging is done by means of zoning. The city is divided into different districts, in each of which certain uses or types of buildings are permitted. If we are at present using a bedroom as a coal cellar, so to speak, the coal is allowed to lie there until it is all used, after which no more is allowed there, and the room is put to its rightful use.

The classification of a district is not made to cover the present use of that district. Nor, it should be understood, is it an attempt at a more or less intelligent guess at its future probable use. The district is zoned into that for which it is best suited, having regard to its present use, and the probable development of the city as a whole.

Traffic Control
Another branch of town planning which should be mentioned in passing is that of traffic control. In some cities it has become necessary to zone the streets into various classes of traffic. Some of the classifications are: Fast traffic, slow through traffic, and stopping traffic. Other cities have the customary traffic and parking by-laws co-ordinated to the city plan, and the development of each different district directed along streets which are, or can be made, best suited to the kind and density of the traffic which is an integral part of that district.

So that in Victoria an endeavor will be made to prevent the ruining of existing good residential districts by smoke from new mills and fac-

Naval Veterans Hold Smoker for Trafalgar Day

The Naval Veterans' Branch of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., brought Trafalgar Day celebrations to an end by holding a successful smoker at the Seafarer Club, Esquimalt.

There was a fine muster present, notwithstanding the fact that the H.M.C.S. Patricia, Argentea, Glenchy, carrying many of the club members, were out of port.

The president of the association, Mr. E. S. Mitchell, acted as chairman, calling the meeting to order with the silent tribute, afterwards addressing the gathering briefly on matters of importance to the association. Mr. E. T. Hughes opened with a piano solo of naval airs, following on which Comrade Chappell, Jasper, Gevan, Pearson, Worth, Faulkner, Worrall and Stallard all contributed to the programme in their well known style.

A message from Lady Emily Walker wishing the members a successful evening was received with applause. At the request of the chair, the secretary addressed the meeting, pointing out that the ceremonies at the Parliament Square showed that the same spirit that prevailed in the days of Lord Nelson was still here. He urged the members to continue the same spirit in furthering the aims and objects of the legion in general, and their own organization in particular.

A memorable evening was brought to a close at 11:15 o'clock by the singing of the National Anthem.

Miner Falls to Death

What People Read in the Wilderness

By GLADYS GEORGEON

"When the last box of books had been unpacked and the contents, old and new, grave and gay, stretched in double rows and tiers on the rough board shelves, the hilltop shack was furnished. Altogether it measured ten by twenty feet, and it held two rooms, under the slanting cedar roof. True the sewing machine, topped by an enormous dictionary, and an atlas stood in the kitchen, with a magazine stand beside the china shelves. No one could have believed that the mahogany desk, once used in Scotland by the great-great grandfather of the family, would look so much at home backed by grey building paper, but perhaps the rows of familiar names that faced it robbed the atmosphere of strangeness. Even an ancestral desk with hand-wrought brass and secret drawers might well feel its grandeur pale beside the towering Douglas fir, whose branches all but swept the windows in the winter winds.

Geoffrey of Monmouth and Malahad had scarcely been set aside by side, jostled by Chaucer, when, in the midst of a downpour, a knock sounded on the new board door.

A Visitor's Quest
It opened with a figure drenched through the regulation rainy day outfit of "Quixote" Island—the legs and shoulders wrapped in gunny sacks, with one worn monk-like in a cowl pulled over the face. Though the costume was the costume of "Quixote," the voice that issued from the improvised garments was, surprisingly, the voice of Oxford.

Apologetically, the visitor explained that he had heard that she and arrived with her boxes of books, and being a poet as well as a returned soldier-preceptor in need of a book of reference, he had tramped seven miles over the mountain trail and logging skid road to ask if she had by any chance Dante's "Inferno."

Now, her own illuminated vellum Dante having gone in a moment of pre-war sacrifice, to swell a prisoner of war fund, the hostess shook her head.

"Since we haven't the 'Inferno,' will 'Paradise Lost' do instead?" the house dreamily from her place near the door, and then in the laugh that broke the ice, the visitor was welcomed into the shack and to a seat by the stove.

After tea and an excited forage through the shelves, he went off with a kit-bag full of old friends to try his luck at a log cabin down the road. There the hostess had seen the big green book that a Winnipeg auctioneer of the palm days had once held temptingly forth as "Dante by door," and she shared the poet's hope that it would be—as it was—gladly lent and carried across the island.

It was at once apparent that if one could not carry away doubloons and pieces of eight from the Spanish island of romance in the North Pacific, one had brought still better treasure there. From the borrowed shelves, from the homestead to homestead that winter, grew the community library work.

The Provincial Government having a travelling library service, it decided to ask for regular shipments of books, and these were promptly and gladly supplied. The range in these libraries is wide, from fairy tales to the newest technical works, and an effort always is made to meet the needs of each rural community sharing in the free service. When Quixotians, by their eager lists of wanted books, stood revealed as enthusiastic readers, the cases arrived marked "special," surprising even the most child-like acceptor of Government supplies by the quality as well as the large proportion of requested books.

The voluntary librarians take turns in work on mail days. In winter, the fire in the church hall is kept up and a kettle boiling, so that visitors can be regaled with needed refreshments while choosing from these books and the Presbyterian Coast Mission list. This last, chiefly fiction of the popular sort, is warranted to appeal to the "tired business man" of the adjacent logging camps.

Nominally one sits over the card catalogue two hours, but who could be too particular as to time on "Quixote," where all clocks are vague. As long as one is sure that it is morning or afternoon, as the case may be, the mere name of the hour does not matter. Of course, if the semi-weekly ship to civilization must be caught (she being a craft with a well-known indifference to schedule), it is a good plan—perhaps—to keep one's timepiece wound in accord with the postmaster's clock, but as a general thing the librarians two o'clock may be your one, or my half past, either, so she waits till all likely pilgrims are served.

First, one day, dashed up the owner of the Dante, in his light wagon, with the new box of books, which he had hauled voluntarily from the wharf. Someone else had thoughtfully come provided with a screw driver, and in a few minutes the case had been unpacked, and the books, many new and in fascinating jackets, are put on the shelves ready for all comers.

First comes a lady with a basket full of "Presbyterians" to return. One has had not been so pleased with Sabatini's latest, and another wanted to renew "The Man From Glen-garry." The father of the family was of that same stock, and the boy wanted him to read the book on his return from the salmon fishing next week.

Her daughter would like a book on peony culture, her hopes having been stirred by a recent magazine article, so that she felt something more ethereal than poultry-raising might be made to pay for her annual visit to "town," a hundred miles away. She herself had been thrilled by Tichner-Edwards' "Lore of the Honey Bee," and felt that her part of the rancherie demanded bees.

The Poet's Wife
The poet's wife arrives. Genius is burning on the pre-emption, and the poet cannot leave his typewriter, but he'd like some of "Conrad's," having discovered that his nearest neighbor had sailed the seven seas with Conrad, but had never read his books. She herself would like a practical book on baking, these Canadian stoves having ways of their own, and her Beeton being much too lavish for wilderness conditions. But American measurements, which prevailed in the only cook book sent, this time being beyond her, she accepted a neighbor's offer for a worn but trusty "Ladies' Aid" compilation.

A young girl returns an Ethel Dell with reluctance, extracting a promise that it shall go out until her friend at the other side of the island, who snatched at a thrilling chapter with her "other day, comes or sends someone for it. She departs with "White Flag" and "Poor Man's Rock" and an armful of gorgeous picture books for the titles of their family, who are too young to tackle the long rough trails to school. But the choice of children's books is hard to make, so fascinating are they all. Hans Andersen, Stevenson, Field, Rose Fyleman, and all their goodly company, in handsome bindings, illustrated by Dulce Jackson and their "yez," are givings to these babies in the wilderness all that the darlings of the most luxurious nurseries can wish.

A small girl goes happily homeward with a brand new "Peter and Wendy" carefully folded into a clean sack. An ex-missionary to India is delighted to find a much-reviewed book on that country. Her companion wants something light. "We're busy folks," she explains, "and we ain't got time for no heavy stuff. What's this here 'Rudyard' by Kipling? It's fig print. I'll take that." "Maria Chapdelaine" is returned as "too blooming true" by a lady who has earned a right to say so. An elderly man eases the heavy pack of groceries from his shoulders and takes a cup of tea with gratitude. He had rowed for an hour from his distant inlet to a tiny trading strait for two miles before striking the main road, and then he has three more miles, though easier going, before reaching the post office. Now after stocking up with mail and provisions, he is on his way back. With luck he can sail home in this breeze and reach his inlet before dark, where a solitary point of light, high up on the hillside, will mark his lonely wife's vigil. The only woman for miles; she fills her spare time with reading, so her husband adds double the regulation quota to his load. But his pleasure at finding "I can remember R. L. Stevenson" (for he can, too) is reward enough for the extra weight he carries.

The large and exuberant cook, from a logging camp on the next island hurries in and sinks into a protesting chair with relief, plumping down upon the table a heavy book wrapped in paper.

Shakespeare
"Say, that was the finest thing I ever read," she declared emphatically. "I've kept it long overdue, but you ought-a seen me an' two or three of the boys at the camp. Couldn't get enough of them yarns. Say, an' I got it kinda mused, lettin' it get damp when I put it into the old cedar at our cross-roads for Mrs. McNeal to have a read of. If it spoiled, why I'll pay, and be just as glad, for though me and them fellers I was tellin' ye of has sent down to town to see can we get us some copies, it's doubtful if they'll have them in stock. It was wrote you see back in the ole days—in those historic days— but say, the guy that wrote it he sure knew folks." She opens the parcel, and the intrigued librarian pokes forward to read the title of this marvelous thriller, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," or some such thing she thinks. But—"There," exclaims the cook, "'Works of W. Shakespeare,' and some works, believe you me!"

Everyone is not always pleased, however. Sometimes the supply of novels does not go around, and sometimes those that do go round are complained of. Comments range from the frank "Got no use for that heavy stuff" to the plaintive regret of the lady that found modern writers far too true to life. She and her sort were out for glamor, and somehow could not see it in the place in which she lived, though to some of her neighbors it was "paradise enough." As might not be expected, the settlers who haughtily declare that they have no time to read are the people who, as the years go by, get the least accomplished on their homesteads. Magazines are carried miles and exchanged in the library, and gradually Women's Institute meetings and farmers friendly confabs over the bookcase are bringing a closer knowledge of neighbors, book friends, and the outside world to this community. And all because, one day, a poet wandered forth in search of Dante.

Prospector Is Rescued By Search Party Sent

NEW WESTMINSTER, Oct. 21.—Deserted by four comrades after a prospecting trip which started last June had been in progress two weeks, seventy-six-year-old H. A. Brown, of Grand Forks, B.C., has just returned to this city after an exploration of the mountains to the north of Pitt Lake, which, according to the aged prospector, are highly mineralized and contain extensive aluminum deposits. Brown's return was in the nature of a rescue. Two weeks ago anxiety for his safety was felt and Provincial Constable Elliott, of Mission, and Roy McMartin, an experienced trapper and timber cruiser, were dispatched in search for the veteran prospector. They found him, lying in his cabin at the head of "Seven-Mile Creek," twenty-five miles from civilization, with frozen feet.

University Extension Lectures Are to Be Announced Shortly

In the course of the next few days the committee of the Victoria University Extension Association expects to announce the programme of lectures arranged for this season.

A request was sent to the Extension Lecture Committee of the University of British Columbia for courses of lectures on "History" and "The Drama," and an interesting list of lectures has been received. This list will be published when dates have been fixed and other details settled. The primary object of the University Extension movement is to bring the University into closer touch with the people who have not had the opportunity of attending the university. In Great Britain thousands of lectures are delivered every season in all parts of the country, the leading universities maintaining special lectures for this work, and the lectures are well attended. Some of the American universities also make a feature of this work, and for several years the University of British Columbia has been active on these lines, but as yet the movement in this country has not attained the same proportions it has reached elsewhere, the local association being as yet the only University Extension Association in Canada.

Improved Refrigeration Cold, Frosty, Dry—

You can't call Kelvinator a substitute for any other form of refrigeration any more than you can call the automobile a substitute for the horse.

For Kelvinator is improved refrigeration. It is colder; it is more uniform; it produces dry, frosty cold; it keeps foods longer and keeps them better.

Then, too, it is automatic. It requires no replenishing, little attention, and refrigerates month after month with clock-like regularity. Kelvinator replaces all previous forms of refrigeration it is true. But it is not a "substitute." Kelvinator is—Kelvinator!

MANY ACTIVITIES AT STRAWBERRY VALE

Folk and Classical Dancing to be Taught Under Auspices of Women's Institute

Classes for teaching of classical and folk dancing have been started by Mrs. Gaskill, of Victoria, under the auspices of the Strawberry Vale Women's Institute, and are held every Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock in Strawberry Vale Hall. The hour has been placed so as not to interfere with school hours.

Another of the fortnightly dances to be held in Strawberry Vale Women's Institute, will take place on Wednesday evening next, October 27. Mrs. Williams is convener, and refreshments and good music are being provided.

A few more pupils are required to join the dressmaking classes to be held by the Women's Institute, and anyone wishing to join may obtain information by telephoning Mrs. George Jones, at Colquitz 511. A very nominal charge is being made, and a first-class teacher provided. It is hoped to start the first lessons next week.

Church anniversary services will be held in Wilkinson Road United Church on Sunday, October 24, when the Rev. J. P. Westman, of Centennial Church, Victoria, will preach at the service in the morning, and the evening service will be taken by the Rev. W. M. Scott, of Victoria West. On Tuesday evening a supper will be held in celebration of the event. The Ladies' Aid, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. A. E. Campion, is in charge of arrangements. A programme has been arranged to follow the supper.

Congratulations are being extended to Mrs. C. H. Williams, president of the local Women's Institute, who was elected a director of the Vancouver Island division of the B.C. Women's Institutes at the convention recently held in Victoria.

Women's Clubs And Societies

Typographical W.A.

Many members were present at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the local branch of the International Typographical Union, held on Thursday afternoon at the Campbell Building. Mrs. S. V. Bowers presided. Routine business was attended to, including satisfactory reports from the various active committees. A letter of thanks for kindness during her recent indisposition was received from Mrs. W. E. Skett, the best wishes of the auxiliary for her complete convalescence being conveyed to her. The auxiliary is indebted to Mrs. A. W. Stokes for the kind offer of her home at 725 Pine Street for a social gathering on Saturday, November 13.

Turnage Sale

The rummage sale under the auspices of the Metropolitan Ladies' Aid will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the old Congregational Church, corner Quadra and Mason Streets.

LOCAL DELEGATES TO W.B.A. RALLY

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—Women delegates from Victoria, Nanaimo, and other parts of Vancouver Island, from the Fraser Valley and other towns of British Columbia will participate in the rally here, on October 23, of the Women's Bazaar Association. The rally has been called by Mrs. Lora Baker, deputy supreme commander for the Province.

The sessions will open in the morning of the convention date, when a welcome to the visitors will be given, and the response will be made by Mrs. Colin Laing, of Victoria.

Miss Gildea to Address Women's Canadian Club

Owing to the illness of Lord Elgin and his disruption of plans for his tour, Lord and Lady Elgin will be unable to visit Victoria, thereby cancelling the plans made by the Women's Canadian Club for a reception to Lady Elgin. In place of the reception, the club will hold a meeting next Tuesday afternoon, October 26, at 2:45 o'clock at the Empress Hotel, when Miss E. Gildea, of Dorsetshire, England, will be the speaker. Miss Gildea is a bright and witty speaker, and it is anticipated that members will turn out in force to hear her address.

Women's Institutes

West Saanich

The fortnightly sewing meeting of the West Saanich Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. T. Walker, Brentwood Bay, on Tuesday afternoon. Many articles were made for the bazaar on December 3. A letter was read from the secretary of the Girls' Guides thanking the members for the use of the hall. The members will take charge of the dining-room at the Saanich police hall, to be held in the Agricultural Hall, Saanichton, on November 12. At the close of the meeting tea was served by the hostess. During the tea hour Miss Lily Walker entertained with several violin solos.

Boy Scouts Sale

A monster jumble sale in aid of the Boy Scouts' Association funds will be held today at 1412 Government Street, in the old Victoria Hall building. The sale will be opened at 10 a.m., and the promoters are confident that it will receive the generous patronage of the public.

Included among the articles to be placed on sale is a fine assortment of men's, women's and children's wearing apparel as well as a varied collection of useful and ornamental household articles. Of particular interest is the fine selection of vases, bric-a-brac and antiques which have been donated to the sale by various people interested in the Scout movement. All articles will be offered at bargain prices, the promoters having marked everything at figures which will insure their disposal before closing time. The sale will be one of the most successful of its kind ever held in Victoria.

Of Boleros and Sleeves

Paris Still Favors the Ultra-Slim Silhouette—Velvet one of the Most Fashionable Fabrics

Boleros, tunics, flat flounces, pictureque sleeves are among the new fashions. They are applied in many ways and are made of many materials.

A velvet dress may have a bolero shaped like the flat flounces on the skirt. A lace dress may have a bolero to its full skirt and a high collar. A cloth or Kasha coat-frock may have a bolero which begins under the arms and forms a little coat in front. A tunic may be straight and slim, or full from a smocked hip yoke, or again, it may fall from a high waist line. The skirt under a tunic is all ways slim. A cloth tunic may be slit at the sides and have buttons and button holes, as though unbuttoned, or the slit may be at the back or in front. A three-quarter length tunic of black taffeta is trimmed with four narrow bands of light grey squirrel round the hem; the long, tight sleeves have the same trimming. A three-quarter gold lace tunic is worn over a pink chiffon underskirt. A mature lace tunic is worn over a skirt in a deeper shade of chiffon and has threads of silver to gather it close to the hips as in a yoke. With and without sleeves, as they are for the afternoon or evening, tunics are worn.

Variety of Sleeves

The picturesqueness of sleeves is clear. A dress of yellow-green chiffon velvet is embroidered finely in silver and trimmed with white fur. It has long panel sleeves which hang down to the edge of the skirt, leaving the arm closely encased in tight-fitting sleeves which form points over the hands. The ends of the panel sleeves are embroidered with Magyar sleeves, which are made of velvet, and are fitted the arms, are embroidered in silver to the elbows. The dress is straight and slim, opening down the front to show silver embroidery. A border of white fur forms the collar and edges the opening down the front from neck to hem. The style of the Middle Ages have inspired many picture dresses this season. The crinoline dress may be displaced by them.

Magyar sleeves are made on coats of all kinds, but they are not becoming to sloping shoulders. A black taffeta coat with Magyar sleeves is trimmed with light golden fur. A beige tweed traveling coat also has sleeves of this kind. A lace coat may even have them. A slightly bloused coat to the hips is noticeable, and sometimes it thickens the figure. A cloth coat and skirt, the skirt slim and straight, the coat light round the hips, to fasten with one button at the waist, and a bow back which is very slightly bloused all round. An evening cloak in velvet may be bloused at a low waistline and swing full below it.

Coat Materials

Smyna velvet is a fashionable material for long coats to be worn over georgette dresses. In brown, grey, rust red, olive green, this velvet looks warm and comfortable. A coat of brown Smyna velvet fastens down the side from the left shoulder and has a straight collar of brown fur and cuffs of the same. It is lined with self-colored crepe de Chine and may be worn over a dress of orange georgette, golden brown velvet, tomato red crepe, or over brown as sober as itself. Corduroy velvet is also used. But these velvets are stronger than the plain surface chiffon velvet.

Black with one strong touch of color is usually the first choice. A black georgette dress with a heavy tassel of tomato red silk fringe down the skirt is worn under a black velvet coat trimmed with black fox fur and lined with black satin; the hat is of black velvet. Another black ensemble is in dull-faced cloth spliced in lines of the cloth used inside out; it is trimmed with light grey squirrel and lined with grey crepe de Chine; under it is a black coat of cloth to match which has a grey suede waistcoat; and the hat is of black or grey felt and very simple.

Slim Silhouettes

Neat tailor-mades, slim, straight long coats in cloth or velvet, little dresses of silk under them, felt or velvet hats, furs on the shoulders or round the throat and wrists are now seen in Paris, with neat browns, grey, beige, or black patent leather shoes over stockings which are vaguely beige or grey. The fashionable line is little and slim. Gloves of fine grey, beige, brown, or maroon suede are edged round the wrists with gold or silver. The gauntlet glove is still fashionable, but a mouster glove may be of antelope, leather, or chambray. Gloves are not worn in the evening.

Plan for Halloween

STRAWBERRY VALE, Oct. 22.—Strawberry Vale Women's Institute has completed arrangements for its annual Halloween party, which will be held in Strawberry Vale Hall on the Eve of All Souls, October 31, at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. C. H. Williams is convener, and a large committee of Institute ladies, together with the teaching staff of Strawberry Vale School, have arranged an evening's entertainment for the young folks which promises to surpass the previous year's events. Games, peculiar to the mysterious night of departed spirits, will be played, and refreshments served. Costumes worn by those attending will be judged in several classes and good prizes awarded for the best. At 9:30 o'clock the older young folks will join in the entertainment, dancing having been arranged to start at this time.

On Wednesday evening a large number of friends gathered at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. Foster, Wellington Road, to assist in celebrating the birthday of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Foster. Games and dancing were enjoyed, and dainty refreshments were served.

Annual City Police Ball Is Brilliant Function

Hundreds of Guests Attend Great Ball at Empress Hotel Given Under Distinguished Patronage—Lieutenant-Governor Bruce Attends Function

One of the most brilliant balls held in the city took place last evening at the Empress Hotel, when about 1,500 people joined in the mirth and revelry of the annual ball given by the Victoria City Police. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor was a distinguished guest, Premier Oliver, Attorney-General A. M. Manson, Mayor Carl Penney, and the Board of Police Commissioners acting as patrons.

The spacious ballroom was festooned with streamers of white and blue paper, shaded pink lights giving an effective light to the room. Both the ballroom and writing-room were used for dancing. Bert Zala's orchestra and Art Bishop's melody-makers providing the excellent music in each room.

Supper was served in the dining-room and in the grill room, the tables being arranged with vases of gold and bronze chrysanthemums. Inspection of the ball was made by Mr. J. T. Boulton acting as manager of ceremonies, assisted by Constable B. Richards. Under the secretaryship of Constable Bishop, an energetic committee comprising Sergeant Thomas Heatley, Detective T. Harvey Bamford and Constable Herbert Raines, worked indefatigably during the evening and deserve great credit for the success of the ball.

Special committees were as follows: Reception, Chief Constable John Fry and Mrs. Fry, and Deputy Chief H. J. O'Leary and Mrs. O'Leary; traffic, Constables H. J. Jarvis, F. J. Pook and A. E. Wells; supper tickets, Constables F. Littlefield and F. Woodburn; ice cream and soft drinks, Constables M. Wilkinson, D. McPherson and George Varney.

Fashions and Foibles

By Shirley Shores

The new list of Autumn fabrics as far as silks are concerned is not a list of new materials with one or two notable exceptions. The silk and satin crepes and the thinner georgettes and silk voiles take care of most of the light frocks that American women have found quite as practical as the wool and rather more comfortable for our overheated houses. The frock illustrated was especially designed for silks. The box-plaited skirt is confined to the front, the back is in one piece and the wide belt gives it the effect of a two-piece frock.

North Saanich Club
Dance Is Success

North Saanich Club Dance Is Success

NORTH SAANICH, Oct. 22.—The North Saanich Social Club held a very enjoyable dance in Berquet Hall on Thursday evening, in commemoration of Trafalgar Day. The hall had been appropriately draped with flags for the occasion, while on the stage, which had been transformed to represent the sea, the good ship Victory sailed triumphantly. Ray Kinlock's four-piece orchestra supplied excellent music for the dancing, replying to the many encores in a most efficient manner. As a feature of the evening many naval airs were introduced. Music for the supper extras was efficiently supplied by the club's five-piece orchestra. About 200 guests were present, dancing being enthusiastically continued until 1 o'clock and was declared unanimously to have been a great success.

The refreshments were served in the dining-room by Mrs. Speedie, the tables being centred with bouquets of Autumn flowers. Coffee was poured by Mrs. Speedie, Miss Jean Speedie and Miss Thomas.

Major Layard, president of the district branch of the Navy League, gave a short, interesting address on "The Alma of the League and the Meaning of Trafalgar Day."

The dance committee is to be congratulated on the success of the affair, and take this opportunity of thanking all who assisted in any way.

SIDNEY, Oct. 22.—The Young People's Society of the United Church held their regular semi-monthly meeting in Wesley Hall. The president, Miss Daniels, occupied the chair. There was a good attendance of members and one new member was welcomed. The secretary, Miss Williams, read the minutes, which were adopted as read. Mr. Frailek and Mr. J. Howton each gave interesting addresses on "Suffering," which were well received. Refreshments were then served by the supper committee and a social half-hour spent before the meeting dispersed.

"Beau Geste"

A Great Mystery Story

By PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN

The three Geste brothers, John, Digby and Michael, are inseparable in their boyhood and youth. Michael, or "Beau," is the leader. They live with their aunt, Lady Brandon, in England. She owns the "little water," a valuable property. One evening Lady Brandon, the Chaplain, Claudia, Isabel, Michael, Augustus Brandon and John are together, and someone suggests a look at the picture room. Lady Brandon brings it out, and while all are looking at it the lights go out. When they go on again Michael disappears after writing a letter to Digby taking him to the coast. The next day follows a day of no later news, a note for John. Then John leaves, leaving a note for Michael, his sweetheart, John, believing that his brothers have gone to join the French Foreign Legion, leaves to do the same and journeys to Paris to enlist.

The Colonel looked up from the desk at which he was writing, as entering, I heard my head bowed; he rose and extended his hand, with a friendly and charming smile. Not thus, thought I, do British colonels welcome recruits to the ranks of their regiment.

"And you, too, wish to enlist in our Foreign Legion, do you?" he said as he shook hands. "Has England started an export trade in the best of her young men? I don't see many Englishmen here from year's end to year's end, but you, mon enfant, are the third this week."

My heart gave a bound of hopeful joy. "Anything like me, sir?" I asked.

"Au bout des ongles," was the reply. "Were they your brothers by any chance? But I will ask no indiscreet questions."

I felt happier than I had done since I had kissed Isabel. "Yes, mon Commandant," I replied. "I wish to become a soldier of France if you will have me."

"And do you understand what you are doing, Monsieur?" asked the Colonel.

"I have read the placard outside," said I.

"It is not quite all set forth there," he smiled. "The life is a very hard one. I would urge no one to adopt it, unless he were a born soldier and actually desirous of a life of discipline, adventure, and genuine hardship."

No, this certainly was not a case of the spider and the fly—or it was an entirely new one, wherein the spider discouraged flies from entering the web.

"I wish to join, sir," I said. "I have heard something of the life in the Sahara from an officer of Spanish, whom I once knew."

The Colonel smiled again. "Ah, mon enfant," said he, "but you won't be an officer of Spanish, you see. . . . Nor an officer of the Legion, either, except after some very long and lean years in the ranks and as a non-commissioned officer."

"One realizes that one must begin at the bottom, mon Commandant," I replied.

"Well—listen then," said the Colonel, and he recited what he evidently knew by heart from frequent repetition.

"The engagement volontaire for La Legion Etrangere is for five years, in Algeria, or any other French colony, and the pay is a sou a day. A legionnaire can be re-enlisted at the end of the five years, and again at the end of ten years. At the end of fifteen years he is eligible for a pension, varying according to his rank. A foreigner, on completion of five years' service, can claim to be naturalized as a French subject. . . . You understand all that, mon enfant?"

"Yes, I thank you, mon Commandant," I replied.

"Mind," continued the Colonel, "I say nothing of what is understood by the term 'service' in the Legion. It is not all pure soldiering at times."

"Nor do I say anything as to the number of men who survive to claim the pension."

"I am not thinking of the pension, mon Commandant," I replied; "nor of the alleged 'pay' so much as of a soldier's life, fighting, adventure, experience."

"Ah, there is plenty of that," said the Colonel. "Plenty of that. It is a real military school and offers the good soldier great and frequent chances of distinction, glory, decoration, and promotion. Some of our most famous generals have been in the Legion, and several of the highest and most distinguished officers of the Legion began their career in its ranks."

Also, if you can show that you have been an officer in the army of your own country, you can begin as a probationary corporal, and avoid the ranks altogether."

"Please accept me as a recruit, mon Commandant," said I.

"Ah, we will see first what the doctor has to say about you—though there is little doubt about that, I should think," smiled the Colonel, and pulled a form towards him.

"What is your name?"

"John Smith," said I.

"Agat."

"Twenty-one years" (to be on the safe side).

"Nationally English?"

"And can I enlist at once, sir?" I inquired eagerly.

"Not until you have slept on it," was the reply. "Come here again tomorrow morning. If you are still of the same mind, and I will enrol you. But think well—think well. And remember that, until you sign your name on the form which I shall give you tomorrow, you are absolutely free, and have committed yourself in no way whatsoever. Think well—think well."

And thanking him gratefully, I went from the room, hoping that all French officers were of this stamp, as kindly and as truly gentlemanly. My hope was not fulfilled.

In the corridors the Sergeant-Major observed, "I sincerely hope Monsieur will return," and as I assured him, with thanks, that I should do so, I fancied, rightly or wrongly, that his smile was a little mocking.

Emerging from the stuffy gloom, I walked down the Rue St. Dominique with a light, say step. I could have danced along, whistling and singing, for I felt practically certain that Michael and Digby were but a day or two ahead of me upon this romantic road, and that I might overtake them at any moment. Probably they were both still in France, possibly in Paris. Once I rejoined them, I should no longer feel this deadly loneliness, and should have someone to whom to talk about Isabel.

Journeys and in lovers' meetings—and but for this separation from her there would not be the immeasurable joy of our reunion.

Really I ought to be very thankful and very happy. I was about to rejoin Michael and Digby, and to live with them again; Isabel loved me and was awaiting my return; and I was on the threshold of a great adventure in an unknown foreign land.

Knowing that I should, after tomorrow morning, live at the charges of Madame la Republique (albeit she seemed a careful and economical turn of mind), my funds were ample, and I would take a face back to the fashionable quarter and spend the rest of my last day of freedom in sight-seeing and idleness.

I would sit in the Tuilleries Gardens, visit the Louvre, look in the shops, have an outdoor meal in the Bois, and generally behave as does the tourist who has a few hours and a few francs to spend.

I carried out my programme, wiled away the day, and crept up to my bedroom at night, no tired for anything but the blessed dreamless sleep of healthy youth.

In the morning I paid my bill and departed from the Hotel Normand, with a curious sense of escape. I did not in the least mind becoming a halfpenny soldier and herding with all sorts and conditions of men; but I did dislike being in a first-class hotel without my dinner-kit, a change of clothes, and the small necessities of the toilet.

I again drove to the Rue St. Dominique, and, on the way, endeavored to talk to myself as though a person of wisdom and experience were talking to another of sense and discretion.

But I greatly fear that this is not what happens when I address myself.

"You have only to stop this face, turn about and go back," said I to me, "and there is no harm done. You will still be a free man and can go back to Brandon Abbas as soon as you like."

But the only reply was, "Beau—Digby—Stand by your pals through thick and thin. Adventure, Romance, Success! Fame and Fortune, and then England, Home and Isabel!" and much similar youthful nonsense.

At the Bureau de Recrutement I was shown into a waiting-room by the Sergeant-Major, who observed:

"Ah, Monsieur has come back than Good!" and smiled unattractively. Again I was reminded of a poem of early childhood, this time of a lady of Riga who indulged in an unorthodox joy-ride.

In the waiting-room were some of the men I had seen on the previous day in the doctor's ante-chamber. Among them were the Teutonic-looking pair, and I thought it probable that if I suddenly called out "Waller!" or "Garcon!" they would both spring eagerly forward. They looked very harmless, insignificant and unattractive—also terribly poor.

The rest were a mixed lot, Latins of sorts, apparently with nothing in common but dire poverty. They did not seem in the least ruffianly or criminal, but just ordinary working-men, desperately poor and as anxious and worried as hungry, homeless people always are.

It was rather curious to feel that whereas, a few minutes ago, I had been a little uncomfortable by reason of my sartorial deficiencies, I now felt uncomfortable at being so obviously a fashionably-dressed and well-nourished this evening—nine-fifteen—and report yourself to the non-commissioned officer whom you will see waiting at the Marseilles terminus. Should you fail to find him, ask any gendarme to direct you to Fort St. Jean, and report yourself there. Don't forget, Fort St. Jean, the military depot, and he rose and extended his hand. "I wish you good luck and quick promotion, mon enfant," he added. "Is there anything else I can tell you?"

"Do you always advise applicants to think better of it, sir?" I asked.

He looked at me a little sharply. "I am not here to deter people from joining the Foreign Legion," he said. "But some strike me as being better suited to the life than others."

He added, with a kindly shake of the hand, "Good-bye and good luck."

I thanked him and turned to commence my "ride on the Tiger" (along the Path of Glory).

"Come with me, recruit," said the Sergeant-Major, as he closed the door, "and move smartly."

In his office he produced a railway warrant for Marseilles, and a form that proclaimed the bearer to be John Smith, a soldier of the Legion, proceeding to the depot in Algeria. He then unlocked a drawer, produced a cash box, and doled out three francs on to the table.

"Subsistence money, recruit," said he. "A wandering of public funds. Three sous would be ample."

I added two francs to them.

member of a wholly different class. My well-cut and fairly new clothing seemed to mock the rags and poverty and general seediness of these poor fellows, my future comrades—all of whom would very probably prove much tougher soldiers than I should be before long, the Sergeant-Major returned and bade me follow him to the Colonel's office.

"Ah, mon enfant," said the old soldier, as I entered and bowed, "so you have not thought better of it, eh? Well, well, you must now do as you please."

"I wish to enlist, mon Commandant," I replied.

"Then read this form and sign it," he said, with a distinct sigh. "Remember, though, that as soon as you have done so you will be a soldier of France, entirely amenable to martial law, and without any appeal whatsoever. Your friends cannot possibly buy you out, and your Consul cannot help you, for five years. Nothing but death can remove you from the Legion."

I glanced over the grey printed form, a contract by which the signatory undertook to serve the French Republic for five years, as a soldier in the Legion Etrangere.

Five years was a long time—but Isabel would only be twenty-three at the end of it, and if Michael and Digby had done this, I could do the same. It would be nice to be a soldier, a colonel at twenty-five, and take Isabel to my regiment. . . .

I signed my name.

"A little error, mon enfant," smiled the Colonel, on reading my signature. "Or you prefer this nom-de-guerre, doublets?"

Blushing and looking like a fool, I asked to be allowed to change my mind and put my own name, and the kindly old gentleman, tearing up the form, gave me another which I signed "John Smith."

"Now, my boy, listen to me," said the Colonel. "You are a duly enlisted soldier. I Prated and must join your regiment at once. If you do not do so, you will be treated as a deserter. You are to take the Marseilles train from the Gare de Lyon

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

Wests and Esquimalt Will Provide Soccer Feature

James Island and Saanich Thistles Booked to Meet in Keenly Contested Game at Central Park—Junior and Juvenile Fixtures Announced

Today's soccer fixtures are:

Senior
Saanich Thistles vs. James Island, at Central Park; referee, P. C. Payne.
Victoria Wests vs. Esquimalt, at Beacon Hill; referee, Dave Swan.

Junior
Five C's vs. Y.M.C.A., at Beacon Hill, upper ground.
Esquimalt vs. Saanich Rovers, at Victoria West Park.

Juvenile
Willows Rangers vs. Saanich Rovers, Beacon Hill, above cricket ground.
Saanich Thistles vs. James Bay, at Central Park.

The kick-off for the senior game is set for 2:45 p.m., while the junior and juvenile games will commence at 3 p.m.

Today is a day that many soccer fans have been anxiously awaiting in the hope of seeing the Saanich Thistles and Esquimalt soccer eleven meet in a battle which would decide the leadership of the First Division. Their longings, however, will have to be held in abeyance until next week. A switch in the schedule has changed today's games.

With their victory over Esquimalt fresh in their minds, the James Island soccer eleven will be out today to take the measure of the Saanich Thistles and add interest to a keenly contested race. The youngsters have things doped quite differently and are confident of overcoming the power men.

At Beacon Hill
The Victoria Wests, who have yet to win their second victory, will have the dockers as their opponents at Beacon Hill. The greenhorns have a snappy team, and in their last encounter with the Esquimaltians they were defeated by the odd goal in three, but the more experienced soccer fan would be apt to give the Wests an even break. Today the greenhorns will be out to take a couple of points from the Esquimalt eleven.

Junior League Interesting
The Junior League is creating no little interest this season, and the brand of soccer that the clubs in this league are displaying is worthy of public support.

It is to this league that the seniors have to look for their players of tomorrow. The Saanich Thistles, who last season were in the Junior League, are a good example, and their present position in senior company speaks well for their early training.

Today's line-ups are announced as follows:

Senior
Victoria Wests—Holman, Whyte and Wright; Shanks, Peden and Harwood; Connon, Qualton, Passmore, Mulcahy and Popham.

Esquimalt—Bridges, J. Watt and Mesher; Hoamer, Hay and DeCosta; Wagland, Warren, Coulter, John Watt and Stewart; reserves, Rickerson and Stewart.

Juvenile
Saanich Thistles—Harper, Kennedy and Price; Cameron, Crowe and Millar; Campbell, Minnis, Burns, Thomas and Kelman.

Junior
Esquimalt United—Bayliss, Nicol and Edwards; A. N. Ocher, Cochran and Blakeley; Woolcock, Thompson, Banks, Burnett and Stewart; reserves, Williams, S. Hicks, Collins, Chandler and V. Hicks.

Saanich Rovers—Reid, Pierce, Woods, B. White, F. Field, Potter, F. Golby, Herman, Walters, H. Tooby, Hale, MacLeod and F. Shaw.

Five C's—MacDonald, N. Martin and Taylor; Charlton, E. Viggers (captain) and Vickers; C. Sutton, S. Esler, C. Collins, F. Groves and F. Viggers; reserves, Henderson, Jelliman and Hume.

Y.M.C.A.—Backus; Woodbridge and Hook; Hammett, Bourne and Underwood; Newell, Rowland, Ross, Patterson and Hill; reserves, Erith and Lewis.

Juvenile
Saanich Rovers—Will be selected from the following: Stevens, A. Field, Hanson, J. Kennedy, Okamoto, Mowat, Hogarth, Christopher, Musgrave, Roemer, W. Graves, Dempsey, Price and Smith.

Saanich Thistles—Will be selected from the following: C. Colberg, E. Gibson, A. Provan, T. Moss, J. Osmann, A. Harnwell, E. Peterson, E. Wilkinson, E. Warren, W. Fye, J. Noble and D. Harvey.

Senior
James Island—Rogers, Carter and F. Aldous; G. Preston, R. Preston and Bowman; G. Aldous, G. South, T. Southern, Seville, Blaisell, Robb, Rivers and Ross.

Juvenile
James Bay—A. Brown, G. Killick, Fraser, Whitehouse, Taylor, A. Taylor, G. Margison, A. Lorimer, B. Davey, J. Allen, S. Naysmith, R. Brown.

INTERMEDIATE RUGBY LEADERSHIP AT STAKE

Victoria College and University School Will Meet in Tussle at Mount Tomlin Grounds

Three intermediate rugby fixtures are on today's sporting card and are as follows:

Normal School vs. Cowichan, at Duncan.

Victoria College vs. University School, at Mt. Tomlin.

Wanderers vs. Victoria High School, at High School grounds.

All games will commence at 2:30 p.m. sharp.

Feature Game
The feature game of the series should be at Mt. Tomlin, when the College and University School clash.

These clubs were victors in the opening fixtures last week, the Victoria College taking the count of the Normal School by a 6-0 score, while the University School defeated Cowichan and sent them back home with a 6-0 score chalked up against them.

Victors in this game will gain possession of the first rung in the ladder.

First Appearance
The Wanderers, who had a bye last week, will be out for the first time at the High School grounds with the students as their rivals. The team are reputed to have a strong line-up awaiting the sound of the whistle. The Victoria High School will be out to get revenge for their defeat at Brentwood last week. At Duncan two of last week's defeated clubs will battle for their first victory, namely, the Normal School and Cowichan.

The Victoria High School line-up is announced as follows: Frisell, Frisell, Fyfe, Lambert, Killick, Hunter, McConnell, Currie, Heslin, Peden, Hall, Smith, Brooker, Hunning, Walls and T. Killick. Players are asked to be at the grounds fifteen minutes before the game starts.

Canadian Rugby Squad In Action Again Today

Will Be Trying for Third Straight Victory When They Meet Varsity at Royal Athletic Park—Locals in Splendid Shape for Coming Tussle

The Victoria Canadian Rugby team is making its third appearance of the season this afternoon at the Royal Athletic Park with an excellent chance of securing its third victory of the season. The league is known as the Big Three, and judging from their performances so far, the Victoria squad is the biggest of the three.

At any rate, if they do not take the Varsity men into camp this afternoon it will not be for the want of conscientious training and plenty of strenuous practice.

There has had to be a few changes made in the line-up since the last game, but these are not calculated to weaken the machine in any way. Art Lewis, former snap for the Queen's champions for several years, will be in his favorite position on the Victoria line-up today and Dick Wilson, the former McGill star, will work the inside of the three-back position and call the signals. Here is the line-up:

Snap, Art Lewis; inside, Watson and Howe; middle, Foster and McDonald; outside, Grant and Burnes; Quarter, Dick Wilson; flying wing, Renny McMillan; quarter-backs, Ranyer, Grubb and Fraser; Substitutes, Putman, Peden, McMurche and Blake.

The game will start at 2:30 o'clock.

CITY BOWLING LEAGUE IS OPENED BY MAYOR

Civic Head Rolls First Ball and Registers Strike Before Large Crowd of Maple Smashers

A strike by Mayor Pendray and a spare by Alderman W. Cullin sent the City League bowlers away to a good start last night. A large gathering of bowlers were on hand to see the mayor send the first ball down the alleys and when the strike was registered loud applause greeted the bowler.

Harry Buckle, president of the City and Commercial Bowling Leagues, introduced the mayor and Alderman Cullin to the crowd present, and stated that the game which would follow the opening ceremonies would bring together the "Colonist" champions of season 1924-25, and the Eagles, present holders of the championship.

Following the exhibition by the Worshipful the Mayor of the game should be played, the Eagles and the Colonist teams took the floor, but none of the men seemed able to settle down to their usual game. The gallery may have had something to do with this, as it was one of the largest ever seen at the alleys. No player reached the 200 circle neither were any 100 scores registered. The Eagles took two out of the three games from The Colonist and the scores were as follows:

Colonist
Chislett 144 168 149—461
Mastion 127 165 148—441
Mason 144 125 141—410
Macdonald 140 120 146—406
Hawkins 161 153 158—472
Totals 716 742 742 2,200

Eagles
Fairall 160 176 155—491
Moore 161 173 148—482
Potts 160 131 178—469
Vinnall 152 123 135—410
Bell 123 164 121—408
Totals 756 767 737 2,260

This Afternoon
Today's game between James Island and the Colonist Night Owls is expected to prove quite interesting, it being the first time for these two teams to stack up against each other.

The club is expected to capture the title that will be at stake.

The two Canadian championships will be:

100 yards free style, men.
220 yards free style, for women.
The B.C. championships will be as follows:

Women's senior relay, 200 yards.
Men's senior relay, 200 yards.
Fancy diving, senior men, from three-metre board.
Men's 300 yards free style.
Junior's 100 yards free style.
Water polo.

Additional events by local aquatic stars will assure the spectators of a good evening's entertainment.

The water polo, it is expected, will be an intercity game between Vancouver and Victoria. Local swimmers are training for the gala in the hope of bringing home to their club.

Monte Munn Wins
NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Monte Munn, of Vancouver, won the title of the seventh round of a ten-round heavyweight match at Madison Square Garden, when the Cuban fighter was disqualified by the referee for failing to put forth his best efforts.

Frank Nighbor Signs For Twelfth Straight Season With Senators
OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Frank Nighbor, centre pivot of the Ottawa Hockey Club, signed his contract with the Senators yesterday. This will be his twelfth consecutive season with the local N.H.L. club.

NANAIMO FOOTBALL
Play North Shore at Vancouver Today in Coast League Fixture

NANAIMO, Oct. 22.—Nanaimo City football team leave Saturday morning for Vancouver, where they will play North Shore in their second game of the Pacific Coast League of this season. Last Sunday they defeated the Davenporters by two to nil. On October 3 the Davenporters held the North Shore team to a seven-to-two draw, and local fans believe Nanaimo should win tomorrow. Jack Clark will be back in the line-up for the first time this season. The team will be:

Goal, Tait; backs, Perry and Edmunds; halves, Knight, McFarlane (captain) and Stobart; forwards, Wilson, Sandland, Cowie, Clark, Minto and Thompson.

The Davenport football team to meet St. Saviours here this week-end will be as follows:

Goal, J. Dixon; backs, R. Hinchman and P. Courtney; halves, R. Devlin, C. Rees and E. Muir; forwards, R. Hancock, Sandland, P. Parks, J. Biggs and E. Stone.

Frielle Wins Handicap
NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Earnings of the Harry Payne Whitney racing stable for the year were increased to $100,000 today when Frielle won the Feature Breechit handicap for two-year-olds, $1,500 added, at Empire Track.

The Whitney filly quoted at 7 to 1, led Patent over the six furlongs by a length and a half, with Flying Soud nailing out the favorite, Premier, for third place.

The fancy thing about it all is that, although none of them seem inclined to credit JACK DEMPSEY with any brains yet more than one person has claimed that it was his brains which made Dempsey champion, so apparently brains are a desideratum in the fighting business, so long as the fighter himself hasn't got any.

At any rate Dempsey won his title by mere slogging at a big human punching bag. Both KEARNS and DEFOREST claim to have supplied the brains necessary for the defeat of Willard, and yet it is how DeForest describes the slaughter:

"The first time Dempsey landed on that spot for which he was aiming (according to instructions from the brainy one), Willard spat as such. The second time he split the inside of Willard's mouth. In between he landed so many blows that Willard's face was raw. The giant was so big that Dempsey virtually had to hammer him into submission." There's brainy work, eh?

When Toney beat Dempsey he did give an exhibition of some fairly good boxing, he appeared to use his head (his own head) as well as his hands and he won apparently by being the better boxer.

Boxing is supposed to be a scientific game. It will do that game no harm if the title is held again for a while by a man who is not just a ferocious fighter, but who can use his brains—in and out of the ring, and who would appear to be more calculated than any man who has held the title for many years to bring back some of the NOBLE ARTS nobility and prestige as a sport.

Basketball League Teams To Start Action Tonight

Sunday School Association Is Starting Season Tonight With Four Games at Memorial Hall—Month's Practice Has Put Players in Fine Condition

The 1926-1927 basketball season will be ushered in this evening, when the Sunday School Basketball League stages four snappy hoop games at the Memorial Hall. These games will be the first of the present season, and the officials at the head of the association are looking forward to a full house. The teams that will be seen in action tonight are of the finest calibre, and have been practicing faithfully for the past month, so that every member of the respective squads is in first class condition. Besides this, a good many of the players are more or less well known to the local fans, and are capable of turning in some fine basketball. This is especially true with the Christ Church team and the Andrews from St. Andrews.

Juniors Start
The opening tussle will be a junior girls' affair between the Wahelos and the Sunshines from the First United Church. The former team, which has been advanced into senior company, the St. Andrew's lads figure they have a golden opportunity of taking the pennant.

The following is the schedule of games billed for tonight:

6:30—Junior Girls, Wahelos vs. Sunshines.

7:15—Intermediate "B" Boys, Capitol vs. Ramblers.

8:00—Intermediate Girls, Fairfield vs. Oak Bay United.

9:00—Intermediate "A" Boys, Andrews vs. Christ Church.

first time last year, with the result that they gained considerable experience, even though they failed to land at the top of their division. On the other hand, Oak Bay is making their initial appearance this year and figure they have a team which will prove a thorn in the side of their more experienced opponents. Like the Centennial Church, Oak Bay has sent in entries for three teams, and as this is their first year in Sunday school basketball it will be very interesting to note how these various teams progress.

The Feature Game
The feature game of the program and the one that everybody seems interested in is the intermediate "A" game between the Andrews and Christ Church. These two teams are probably two of the fastest intermediate boys' teams playing this year. Last year the Andrews were noed out of the championship by the well-known Falcons, and now that they have advanced into senior company, the St. Andrew's lads figure they have a golden opportunity of taking the pennant.

Harry Greb Succumbs to Accident's After-Effects

Former Middleweight Champion Fractures Nose in Automobile Accident—Death Due to Heart Trouble Aggravated by Shock, Specialist Declares

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 22.—Harry Greb, former middleweight champion of the world, died in a private sanitarium here this afternoon after an operation for the removal of a fractured bone from his nose. The bone was fractured when Greb was in an automobile accident two weeks ago at Pittsburgh.

Death was due to cardiac trouble aggravated by the combined shock of the operation and the accident, Dr. Charles S. McGovern, noted specialist, who attended him, said tonight. Greb, who had been a patient of Dr. McGovern for many months, underwent an operation for the removal of a cataract on his right eye about three weeks ago. Immediately afterward he returned to his home in Pittsburgh. In the automobile accident, in which the car plunged over an embankment, the wound from the operation was opened and several bones in the nose were fractured, causing him to breathe improperly. He returned to Atlantic City primarily to have his eye treated. Examination proved his nasal passages had been entirely blocked and, as he wished to re-enter the ring, he decided on the operation for the removal of the fractured bone.

"The operation was started under local anæsthesia," said Dr. McGovern, "and after, during its course, this was supplanted by nitrous oxide and oxygen gas. He left the operating table apparently in good condition at 1:30 last night. At ten o'clock this morning his heart action began to fail and rapidly grew weak despite the administration of stimulants, until he died at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon."

EASTERN EXHIBITION IS WHITE ELEPHANT

Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial Show Now Asks Five Millions With Which to Pay Deficits

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The Sesqui-Centennial Exposition, built out on the sand lots at the edge of this city, and now seeking $5,000,000 from the city with which to pay bills, never had a chance to succeed—at least this year. Those who have been most closely concerned with nursing it through its gawky growth say this with unqualified emphasis.

There are several reasons given for what has happened to the most ill-fated of all national expositions. In the order of importance these reasons are: Lack of preparation—the exposition should have been postponed at least a year—it has rained eighty-six out of the 130 days it has been open, and it has been "knocked" by all those who saw it in the first month or six weeks of its existence, and by Philadelphia at all times.

The exposition which Philadelphia has hoped at one time would make their city the centre of the United States, for several months has become a white elephant, for which more and more city money is constantly being expended. It is running at a deficit all the time. So serious has the financial situation been pictured that it has been suggested that the tax rate may have to be raised to pay the bill, and another suggestion for meeting the present bill has aroused much opposition, and in the minds of some citizens has taken on the aspect of a scandal.

Suggested Remedy
This suggested means of obtaining revenue centres about the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company. When ways and means of raising money were put before the common council, the most popular, at least in the council, was the proposal that the Philadelphia Rapid Transit take over the carrying charges on what is known as the Frankford Elevated Line. That would increase the city's borrowing capacity by about $14,000,000 and enable the city to appropriate $5,000,000 more in addition to the $15,000,000 it has already appropriated for the Sesqui, as it is called down here. The city has been carrying this much of the expense of this line.

In return for taking over these carrying charges the Transit Company was to receive a thirty-year lease on the line, the franchise for which expires in about a year. That bill was passed through the council. Mayor Kendrick announced that he would sign it, but so far he has not done so. Whether he will or not is problematical.

The request for $5,000,000—was made by the directing officials of the exposition in July. It has been known for some time that the exposition needed more money, and because of that general knowledge there was incredulous amusement at the attention which Mayor Kendrick's statement of two days ago received. When the directing heads of the exposition, men who are not in politics, made their request they were told that they could have $2,000,000. They protested that that was not enough, and that if it was not enough, and that if it was not enough, the exposition would be delayed longer there might be some difficulties in the way of obtaining money.

Ways of Raising Money
Their protests were, unheeded, however, and when the need for money recently became more pressing, the common council discussed three ways of raising it. The one which found most favor was that by which the Transit Company was to get thirty years' extension of its franchise for nothing. This bill quickly and openly passed the council, but caused considerable public opposition. As a matter of fact, the directing heads of the exposition told Mayor Kendrick that they were opposed to the measure.

Whatever way is found out of the financial dilemma, there is no doubt that the exposition is to have a vigorous resurrection at the next election. There has been talk of graft in connection of all kinds of mismanagement, and leaders of both political parties are busy hunting around for someone to blame. It is predicted that if the exposition is ever thoroughly investigated there will be a pretty scandal, which will not have to do with the real estate on which it is built.

GLOBE GIRDLER SEES NEED FOR AIR LINES

American's Desire to "Keep One Foot on Ground" Deterrent to Development of Aviation

The average American's reluctance to get both feet off the ground is the thing that is holding up the development of commercial flying, according to Linton Wells, transworld traveler and record holder, in an interview in The Portland Oregonian. Mr. Wells was in Victoria last July.

"America is the birthplace and home of aviation," said Mr. Wells, "and Americans generally are strong for aviation, but when it comes to flying the usual comment is, 'Well, for myself, I prefer to keep one foot on the ground for a while yet.'"

Mr. Wells is inclined to blame the newspapers for this attitude. When an airplane crashes, the event gets an eight-column scare head, said Mr. Wells, but automobile accidents are so common that they seldom get on the front page any more. The result is that the public doesn't take to flying wholeheartedly.

Passenger Lines Needed
"There is a tremendous need for passenger-carrying air lines," said Mr. Wells. "It took me just 100 hours to come from New York to Portland, and ten hours of this time was consumed by delays—eight hours at Detroit and two hours at Chicago."

"A transcontinental airplane line, or a group of co-ordinated routes, would take a passenger across the country in a third that time. There are unquestionably scores of people making this trip every week, either on business or due to some emergency, who could well afford to travel by airplane, but would not patronize an aerial passenger line because of their fear of flying."

The situation is quite different in Europe. Passenger-carrying lines are accepted over there as a common means of rapid transportation, and the "hop" from London to Paris occasions no more comment than a street car ride.

Despite this fact the next few months will see the opening of two transcontinental commercial routes in America, said Mr. Wells. One of these will be a southern route, leaving New York and going south to Atlanta, New Orleans, El Paso, San Diego and possibly Los Angeles. The other route probably will be through Salt Lake to San Francisco, following the present air mail route.

"There is plenty of capital available for commercial flying. Far-seeing business men see the tremendous future ahead for the industry, once the skeptical attitude of the American public begins to break down."

With a few more passenger-carrying lines in this country, Mr. Wells expects to see America take to flying with all the enthusiasm that it takes to other lines of endeavor, once it begins to recover from the one-foot-on-the-ground frame of mind.

Stunt Flying Harmful
Stunt flying has had a harmful effect on the development of commercial aviation, said Mr. Wells, because the public associates accidents that inevitably result with the hazards of flying, whereas they have virtually nothing in common.

"Stunt flying is just a slow way of committing suicide," is Mr. Wells' way of expressing it. "As contrasted with that form of so-called aviation, Edward S. Evans, of Detroit, and myself, in our twenty-eight-day trip around the world, traveled 8,500 miles by airplane, 2,000 miles of which distance was across a part of Russia where only the birds had ever flown before, and in that entire distance we did not have anything happen that even remotely threatened an accident."

The Pacific Northwest is going to be one of the last coast sections to get a commercial flying route, said Mr. Wells, owing to the fact that its aerial highways are a long way from being "hard-surfaced." Mr. Wells has previously said that of the entire distance around the world the trip from Pisco, Peru, to Hiale, Idaho, was the most uncomfortable on account of the choppy cross-currents of air that race around this region.

Aerial Inspection Made
Mr. Wells visited with Lieutenant Oakley D. Kelly, who is in charge of the Pearson air field at Vancouver, yesterday afternoon. Lieutenant Kelly took Mr. Wells for an aerial inspection of the site of Portland's new landing field.

Mr. Wells said he was very much impressed with the plans that are being made for the Portland air port and believes that when they are carried out Portland will have one of the finest air ports in the country.

"American cities are just beginning to realize the importance of providing close-in landing fields," said Mr. Wells. "The future will undoubtedly

Auto Ordinance Recalled

"Sometimes we are prone to be a little impatient with the seemingly slow progress America is making in commercial aviation. But this progress is slow only in so far as getting a start is concerned. When it comes to it, it will come fast."

"Twenty-five years ago—Chicago prohibited automobiles on its streets. Henry Ford was arrested for driving one. They were regarded as a public menace. Today four out of every five persons in Chicago ride the street cars in automobiles, and it is the fifth person who walks who takes the hazards," Mr. Wells added with a laugh.

problems were offered for solution by modern psychology in the address of D. A. Bates, who mentioned social approval as the greatest factor in influencing the behavior of the pupil. He said, "If the approval of the class is on the side of the student who is doing wrong, it is hopeless for the teacher to do anything, since the approval of our equals is of greater importance to us than any other commendation. There is no place for the teacher who knows it all, who endeavors to impress the pupils with his infallibility, in the schoolrooms today."

A. W. Lang said that he did not know of any moral antiseptic that, given in regular doses, would change the child from a lively little animal into the angel that parents and teachers strive for. He thought that too much was put on the schools today, parents blaming them for behavior of their children, which is by right the parents' responsibility.

Threshing Conditions Vary With Districts

WINNIPEG, Oct. 22.—Enjoying comparatively fine weather, the Province of Alberta is taking the lead in grain marketing on Canadian Pacific Railway lines. The weather and crop report states that from four to five days are necessary before threshing can be resumed in Manitoba. Threshing is going on in the Regina and Moose Jaw divisions. Saskatoon division reports threshing at a few points east of Saskatoon, and fairly general west of that city. Threshing should be general over the entire Alberta district today.

RAILWAY BRINGS RICHES TO WOMAN

FORTUNE OF $5,000 BECOMES $50,000 IN EDGWARE DISTRICT

Underground Railway Extension Results in Boom in Real Estate Values—Big Profits

EDGWARE, Oct. 22.—A woman who made $25,000 with a capital of $5,000, and did not know she was doing it, is once more the romantic figure to whom fortune has come from the land boom that spread over the Edgware district with the opening of the Underground Railway extension here in 1924.

Not only did she not know that her fortune was increasing with the completion of every new half-mile of the shining track, but she never had any intention of speculating with her money. The fortune was forced on her.

She came to live in Edgware fifteen years ago, with the idea of spending the rest of her life in the seclusion of the country. Edgware was then a small village. There were only a few houses and cottages, and the moderate sized house the woman bought stood in five acres of ground.

Logic of a Site

The greater part of this land bordered a road. When the Underground Railway directors began to look for a site for their terminal station the engineers and traffic experts advised them that the logical spot was on this road, exactly opposite the centre of the woman's property.

She had paid $5,000 for the five acres. One morning a representative of a firm of estate agents called on her and offered her $30,000. She accepted and moved out with $25,000 profit, asking the agents to find her another quiet retreat in the country—this time in Surrey.

The five acres are now the finest site in Edgware. The chief shops are being erected along the fields that bordered the road, and the agents are making a handsome profit on the $30,000 they laid out, in addition to the fortune that went to the woman. The house she lived in fetched $300 from the housebreakers. There is a value in everything in Edgware now.

In Nine Months
"This is happening all round the district," said a member of a firm of agents for the area to me. "We ourselves bought a large area of building land for £675 an acre, and sold nine months later for £950 an acre."

Such stories are common. Anyone with any land to sell has made a large profit. Property which was bought for £200 an acre some years ago has now reached £1,500 and more an acre. Even at £2,000 builders will be able to make a profit on the houses they erect, and some are already paying this.

Statue, 25,000 Years Old Bares Glacial Period Art

VIENNA, Oct. 22.—A very interesting little statue has been dug out at Willendorf, in the Wachau. It is a slender female figure of mammoth bone, and Professor H. Bayer, director of the Natural History Museum in Vienna, says it is at least 20,000 or 25,000 years old and the work of an artist of the glacial period. The statuette was found at the side of a huge lower jaw of a mammoth, which had probably given the material for this prehistoric art work. Not far from the statuette lay a carving instrument of yellow Jasper.

Many years ago excavators found at the same place a female figure of flint stone, also dating back into the glacial period, which was later given the name of "Venus of Willendorf." The difference between the two statues, which may originate from the same artist, is very striking. The first was rather stout and clumsy, with an accentuated spreading of female forms, while the second is very long and almost mannish. The head has the shape of a pear and the face is without any expression. It is believed that the second statue is a symbol of the goddess of fertility.

Since the mammoth bone and the carving instrument were found together with the statue, it is obvious that the little sculpture must have been made on the spot where it was found. Probably glacial men had killed a mammoth and eaten its meat and afterward a skilled man among them commenced to carve the figure. This is taken as final proof that Spain and France were not the only classic countries of the glacial period, as many scientists hitherto asserted, but that the territory of present Austria also was inhabited and showed the typical characteristics of glacial culture. It is thought that the colonization of Austria in the glacial period set in later than in Spain and France and that the herds of mammoths in this part of the globe attracted the first settlers.

Table of War Veteran Wins Race With Death

CINCINNATI, Oct. 22.—George L. Hathaway, disabled world war veteran, has just completed, after thirty-nine months of labor, one of the most unique tables and lamps in the world. The outfit is made of 47,854 separate pieces of wood representing seventy-two varieties of trees. Hathaway's only tools consisted of an ordinary pocket knife, a small wood saw and a small hatchet. Hathaway considered himself to be engaged in a sort of race with death. He had returned from overseas at the conclusion of the war shattered in health. The Government sent him to a veterans' hospital in California. It was there that he started upon the table and lamp, with the idea of leaving it as a memorial to the world war. He believes the work saved his life.

The top of the table is a chess board containing 5,280 pieces of wood inlaid. One bit of wood in the table was taken from the Longfellow chestnut tree, which the poet immortalized in "The Village Blacksmith."

COLUMBIA Aaron Hoffman's famous stage play, "Two Blocks Away," has been made into a photoplay by Universal and is the present feature at the Columbia Theatre, where it is playing to capacity crowds.

The Cohens and Kellys is the title of the comedy adaptation, directed by Harry Pollard, whose mastery of mirth is held largely responsible for the popularity of Reginald Denney, who he has directed in many pictures. Charlie Murray, George Sidney and Vera Gordon have the featured roles in the cast which also includes Kate Price, Jason Robards, Olive Blalock, Nat Carr, Mickey Bennett and Bobby Gordon.

COLISEUM The three-act farce, "The Girl in the Taxi," at the Coliseum has been a riot of fun all week and the performance tonight will undoubtedly attract a capacity house.

Enthusiastic applause has been accorded the Coliseum Company during each performance of this screamingly funny play. While all the parts are well handled, the work of Mr. Redmond is outstandingly clever.

DOMINION Rex Ingram can always be depended upon to bring something worth while to the screen. With "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea), his latest production for Metro-Goldwyn, which is showing at the Dominion Theatre for the last time today, the youthful director has again delivered one hundred per cent. It is a powerful modern drama produced and directed by a master craftsman. Ingram took his entire company to Europe and spent more than a year producing the famous Blasco Ibanez story on the original locations described by the noted author in his book. The picture has the Continental atmosphere and its pictorial beauty is beyond description.

PLAYHOUSE Three popular stars of the screen will be seen in Robert T. Kane's "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," which is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre. This trio consists of Blanche Sweet, Lola Wilson and Ben Lyon.

The picture is said to be an unusually diverting comedy, tracing the highly colored career of a bank clerk, John Hart, who, by dint of good acting and clever publicity becomes Don Juan Hartz on the silver screen.

CAPITOL "William Tell," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, is an adaptation of the famous play by Schiller, and was produced on a scale of magnificence that causes spectators every evening to view with amazement the pictorial unfolding of the heroic action of a people determined upon freedom. The direction of the picture was of the most skillful kind; the camera work was splendid; the settings were the most beautiful; the costumes were of the most lavishly endowed Switzerland. The mountains, snow covered and towering in the fields in the distance, were invested with green; the homes of the people as rugged and substantial as the occupants; great castles that were part of this impressive spectacle.

AMERICAN SOPRANO to Sing "Bohemian Girl" At Royal, October 28

Marguerite Hibbard, an American girl, who was educated in voice and music in the United States, is just another wonderful example of what that country is able to do for the ambitious singer who is willing to study at home. Miss Hibbard is an Eastern girl; shortly after her college training she devoted three years to voice training with Herbert Witherspoon, well-known teacher in New York City, and completed her study with the late Charles Clark, of Chicago. She made her debut as guest soprano with the New York City Opera Company, and the splendid reception given her by the critics and public in the Southern city won her a permanent prima donna role with that famous singing organization. Her next opportunity came when she joined the Shubert light opera company presenting the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta in New York City, where her success was assured immediately, bringing about many offers by New York producers of musical comedy, which she refused in the name of her love for better music. This season she joined May Valentine's all-American organization of American trained singers in "The Bohemian Girl," to sing the role of Arline.

"The Bohemian Girl" is coming to the Royal Theatre October 28 and 29.

Pleasant Woman Is Quite Systematic

DOUGLAS, Oct. 22.—Madame Malaine Duvette has been sentenced to die on the gallows for poisoning her husband. The jury departed from the usual lenience shown women and rendered a verdict calling for the extreme penalty. She was slowly killed her husband by putting poison in his coffee daily. She desired to be free from her spouse so that she might marry a Portuguese soldier who fought in the Moroccan campaign. The former soldier was sentenced to five years' imprisonment as an accomplice of the woman. President Douville yesterday commuted death sentences passed on women.

City Manager Issue
Sir,—In your editorial of the 20th instant you say: "Whatever the moral claims (I would substitute 'duty') of the City Council to put a by-law to the people on the subject of the appointment of a city manager, it would seem to stand to reason that the electorate in this municipality should first know fully what they are voting on in such an event. We have never been able to regard this proposal as more than a half-baked scheme."

Please permit me to say: The Council is not above the law, which says, on a petition being presented, signed by sufficient voters, of which we have four times the required number, a referendum shall be submitted. There are over 2,400 serious-minded men and women voters' signatures on the petition. These, at least, and many others, have a fair grasp of what they are going to vote on.

You say: "The present municipal government has made claims again and again to having followed the most economic policy that can be devised in civic administration on the basis of the obligation that exist. We believe it has done well indeed, the experience of the past few years is in itself a conclusive argument against the introduction of a new authority."

The ratepayers' experience of the past few years has been a procession of surrenders of property representing the old regime, and the city and generally cannot stand up against facts. Producing evidence just received of the success of "City Manager Government," permit me to quote from a paper by City Manager Tilgus, of North Carolina, U.S.A.

"After two unsuccessful attempts, the City of Durham adopted the council manager form of government in 1921.

"Durham has increased during the past year from a town of 21,000 to 42,000 in 1926.

"Two years after the adoption of this form of government and before real results could be fully realized, an election was called to vote on the commission form of government. This was done under the guidance of certain political elements, aided by those of the old regime who felt a deep resentment because they had been pushed away from the public trough. This stir in municipal life furnished an excellent opportunity for planning in the minds of the citizens the real accomplishments that had been and were being made, and in spite of the most bitter criticisms and the organized opposition, the form of government prevailed by a vote of three to one.

"There is no waving of a wand in our financial matters. There is the utmost confidence among the bond buyers as to the securities of this city and the business methods upon which it is run. There is no need to worry about the rate in less for operation than it was the three or four years before the advent of this form of government. The result of the collection of miscellaneous revenues which were previously neglected, making each special service take care of itself, and placing direct responsibility upon every administrative officer to deliver the goods within the budget estimate."

To summarize, the City of Durham, through its council manager form of government, has achieved the following: Yected a board of directors to set the policies for its government. This board of directors, which is the City Council, elected a general manager, known as City Manager, and the business of government has been placed upon a firm foundation of wise expenditure, together with economical and courteous and progressive service.

Dean Inge
Sir—So that is over. Hugh Walpole has had his say; and the British Public Schools Club. No apprehension will be felt in any quarter. The Dean of St. Paul's, though patient and tolerant in ideas, would hardly be expected to enjoy the joke created in after-dinner "glossaries," at least, he might be forgiven for overlooking, he might forgive for overlooking, a compiler of statistics, a collector of schoolboy blunders, a reviewer of current literature, and a contributor to the press, hasn't any time to be gloomy.

His new book, "Lay Thoughts of a Dean," must have kept him very busy. He knows the Empire as well as most men; and where the sun is to be found, he knows it. He is alive to the importance of a good understanding being established between the Americans and ourselves; and welcomes the opportunity of addressing them, and to whom he is so kind as to know it, and if he indirectly is the means of leading an irregular pulse, it is well to remember that his greatness in the past is due to such men as he. His kindness never makes him a bit false; and Dr. Inge is absolutely devoid of pose. No unavowed truth bids him withhold it from his readers—experiences which he thinks they will be the better or happier for sharing. His is the instinct to give; and he wishes himself to be a learner to the end.

If the paradox is true, that to achieve the state of soul in which true knowledge is possible, we need to have achieved the knowledge, well, I think Dr. Inge offers his quota. To many of us, who prefer reading with a cigarette, I acknowledge it may be difficult to follow him through his many quests: "Consumptionism," "The Rights of Animals," "Eugenics," "Revolutions," etc. His earlier "Outspoken Essays," show him as a thought-pioneer. The terms are not given; he creates them.

Now that psycho-analysis appears to be losing ground, it is interesting to read Dean Inge on the kindred "science" of autogeneration:

"For my own part, I will have nothing to do with this world of make-believe. It is an abomination to me. I believe that my reason was given me, and my will that I may bring my refractory disposition into harmony with the laws of my Creator. I will neither twist up my mouth when I am in the dumps, nor tell myself that in all respects I am getting better and younger and stronger every day. If I can help it, I will play no tricks with my soul. In the faith that, though bluff may sometimes pay very well in this world, it will cut a very poor figure in the next."

Mentally honest, he goes forth boldly, and faces the result of his mind. Our men of vision have always been thus.

Justice to the Hindus
Sir—What is the principle of Justice in a recent case? A Hindu was charged with an assault upon a woman and fined $20 without any evidence to support the alleged attack on the woman. The Hindu is known to be a very mild, quiet, unassuming and peaceable subject. The very last thing a Hindu would do in this country would be to assault a woman. Such things are even unheard of in their own country amongst their own people. Possibly this case will be reported all over India. If there is an injustice then it is in this kind of thing that creates trouble in the Empire.

Growth of Inanity
Sir,—In my letter in which is stated, "Drugs do much good." I wish to say I have very little use for drugs, except that sometimes they will give a distraught patient a quiet night. But if that quiet night can be obtained through an inflated thought of perfect rest in God and good, rather than the drug, we have our patient that much stronger in will and clearer in the morning. Drugs still have their use, but the writer does not accord them the primary place.

Armistice Day
Sir,—It is indeed regrettable that Thanksgiving Day and Armistice Day have been combined in one holiday throughout the Dominion.

It seems to have been done to avoid having too many holidays in the Fall. If that is advisable, then Labor Day and Thanksgiving Day could have been more fittingly combined. There is nothing conflicting in doing so. Our harvest is well advanced in September, and the rendering of thanks to the Creator for providing food for our needs for another year can be arranged for on Labor Day quite well. Neither commemorate any particular date.

But Armistice Day strikes an entirely different and deeper note in our hearts. Those whose dead lie beyond the sea are not in any mood for merry-making. They cannot tend the graves of those they mourn, but they do want to lay their wreaths on the memorials on this "Day of Remembrance." Surely we are reaping the benefits of the agony they underwent to make the Armistice possible, can give this one day up to honoring them.

For those gallant men who returned with broken bodies which they threw against the gun to keep us safe, have we so little appreciation of what they suffered that we cannot keep this one day free so that we may wend our way with them to the memorial service which they hold in memory of their comrades who "went West?"

Even the two minutes' silence broken by the noise and rush of the work-a-day world and the sacredness of that silence slipping into oblivion! Those to whom this day

MINISTER HEARS CASE OF VALHALLA

Representatives of Syndicate Desiring Cemetery Site at Point Grey Meet Hon. T. B. Pattullo

The Valhalla Development Company, which has been much in the public eye of late in connection with transactions with the Government of the Province of B.C., looking to the acquisition of a cemetery site at Point Grey, is evidently not disposed to let the matter rest with the decision of the Government that the deal cannot be carried out, and that an application for the return of the money actually paid in connection with the matter would be considered favorably by the Department of Lands.

Yesterday, representatives of the company, which included Mr. J. Edgar Sears, its solicitor, visited the Hon. T. B. Pattullo, Minister of Lands yesterday afternoon relative to the situation.

When seen after the meeting the Minister admitted that the matter in dispute relative to this proposed cemetery site were discussed with him. He, however, said that he had nothing he could add in the matter at the present time.

It is understood that the Cemetery Company made a demand, that in addition to the return of the actual money paid over to the Government, that the latter reimburse the company for other outlays that they claim were incidental to starting out on the scheme which it had in view.

While the Minister was unable to say anything in the matter it is presumed that the representatives of the Cemetery Company will have to lay the results of the interview before the principals before anything definite can be agreed upon.

Missionary Asphyxiated By Fumes of Gasoline

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Dead for more than a week, the body of the Rev. James A. Lewis, son of the late Bishop S. Lewis, of the Methodist Episcopal Church in China, was found in his garage at Mamaroneck, N.Y., yesterday by his father-in-law, W. E. Watt, of Chicago, who went east to learn why Mrs. Lewis had received the word from her husband. The Rev. Mr. Lewis apparently was asphyxiated by gas fumes from his automobile. Mr. Watt said in a telegram received here last night.

The Rev. Mr. Lewis for several years has been executive secretary of the Peking University, China, and served in that country as private secretary to the late Bishop James M. Haeford. His body was found sitting at the wheel of his automobile.

BITTERN BROUGHT ON BOARD SALACIA

WILD FOWL LANDED ON DECK OF STEAMER 600 MILES OFF IRELAND

Thought to be Stork or Heron—Is Solitary Creature and Has Peculiar Habits

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—Thought to be a stork or a heron, when it landed on the after-deck of the Donaldson freighter Salacia, 600 miles off the west coast of Ireland, it has now been almost definitely decided that the feathered visitor to the liner is a bittern. It enters Canada as an immigrant, with a hope of possibility of not being deported, provided that accommodation for the bird can be found in Lafontaine Park or other sanctuary in this country.

Shortly after tea-time, when the Salacia had covered almost 600 miles on her way to Montreal from the Irish coast, the ship's cook sighted the bird standing on a rail at the after end of the ship. Approaching carefully, for it had a three-inch wicked beak, he finally managed to capture it. On the instructions of Captain Peter Lawson, commander of the Salacia, a large wooden cage was made and the bird given a new residence, in which it made its first trip to this country.

Various Names

Though the bittern is a familiar species of bird on this continent, it can hardly be credited with having met the Salacia on its way across to England, and having returned to its native land. Its dismal cry, sounding like the blow of an axe on a stake, has gained it various names, such as stake-driver, mire-drum, bog-bumper, thunder-pump, etc. It nests in lonely marshes and swamps, and in summer it is found in abundance. The bird is a solitary creature of many peculiar habits. At the daytime it sometimes stands motionless for hours, on the lookout for frogs, lizards, large-winged insects and meadow mice, on which it feeds, and at night it becomes most active. Though its flesh is prized by some, the bittern is not an important game bird. In Utah, where wild game is not found in abundance, the bird is protected by law throughout the year, but most states do not find it necessary to enact laws regulating the hunting of the bird. In Nova Scotia and British Columbia, the bittern may be hunted from August to March, and from September to March, respectively.

Smugglers of Aliens Given Jail Sentences

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Varying sentences were passed on twelve of the crew of the British steamer Pinar del Rio after the trial for smuggling aliens was suddenly halted by directed verdicts of not guilty for five and guilty pleas for the remainder.

A round-up of two score Chinese and Spanish aliens discovered, careen- ing through Connecticut and New York and New Jersey in Boston taxicabs led to the arrest of the steamer's men at her dock here last month.

Through interpreters, the aliens testified to the discovery of being smuggled. They said they spent the first twelve hours of their trip from Cuba in the stuffy confines of this ship's propeller shaft.

Then came days on end in a half-empty water ballast tank, followed by a 200-mile night dash in taxicabs. The men convicted received sentences of up to a year and fines of $300.

Arizona Maru Will Not Reach Victoria Until 8 A.M. Sunday

LATEST advice from the O.R.K. liner Arizona Maru, state the vessel will not reach Victoria until daybreak Sunday morning, according to Ribbit Consolidated, agents here. The vessel was scheduled to arrive this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, but is being delayed by strong head winds and fog. She has twenty-nine passengers for Victoria and twenty-five tons of freight. She is expected at the Outer Docks at about 8 o'clock.

Much curiosity was naturally aroused among the ship's crew, for no one knew exactly what kind of a bird it was, particularly as it had no webbed feet and because it would not eat. Fish, peas, cockroaches and vegetables were fed the feathered fellow, but these were turned aside with disdain.

Thus, a scarcity of grain cargo space was immediately created in the Argentine, while coal chartering in the northern range ports of the United States is a seriously competing with the Fall demand for space reservations required to move American grain exports to Europe, the department reveals.

Under normal conditions, the flow of British export coal to the Argentine and West Indies provides the necessary space for return grain cargoes from the Argentine to European ports and small allied coal shipments from Great Britain to Mediterranean ports make available the necessary light-draft ocean tonnage required for return cargoes of Russian grain.

PERMISSION RECEIVED FROM POSTMASTER-GENERAL TO LAND CABLE

Distinguished Parties Visit Ship—To Be Open to Public Today Finally at Esquimalt Harbor

The Pacific cable section from Hamilton to Esquimalt Island will be started early next week. It was stated yesterday, when announcement was made that the cableship Domina would leave at an early hour tomorrow for the cable station.

The formal permission from the Canadian authorities to land cable at the station was received from Ottawa yesterday morning. This dispensed of the situation threatened in special messages from London that, pending a decision in the Imperial Conference with regard to the cable dispute, Canada might not be willing to afford facilities at the Dominion end of the route to the new cable to duplicate the service. It is reported that the discussions in London have been amicable and should result in removing the objections taken by the former Postmaster-General, Senator Murphy, on behalf of Canada.

The Domina has proved an interesting rendezvous in Esquimalt harbor for visitors, having many attractions to be observed rare to ships visiting this port. Lieutenant-Governor Bruce and his niece, Miss MacKenzie, Admiral Kingmill and others were welcomed during the day by officers of the vessel.

Today will be the last opportunity to visit the ship during the present stay in port. It is expected that when the Domina has completed her duties she will return to the Old Country.

Schooner A. D. McTier Ashore on Gaspe Coast

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—With waves swamping her and the wind driving at a force of sixty miles an hour, the steam schooner A. D. McTier, ashore off Cape d'Espoir, on the Gaspé Coast, was believed last night to be in considerable danger, according to a report from the Montreal office of the signal service.

A crew of twenty-two men is believed to be on board. On account of the heavy seas no communication could be established between the grounded vessel and shore. There is danger of the ship breaking up.

The McTier was en route from Lake Erie with a cargo of coal for Baie des Chaleurs ports and was rounding Cape d'Espoir, about six miles off shore, when she ran aground.

She is a steel-screw schooner, built in Detroit in 1913. Her gross register is 1,593 tons.

COMOX RECEIVES WATER SUPPLY

WATERWORKS EXTENSION WILL SERVE ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL ON ROAD TO PORT

Undertaking Has Been Planned by Local Residents, But City Will Operate It

COURTENAY, Oct. 21.—For the first time in its history Comox now has a supply of running water. The four-inch extension main from Courtenay is now laid right through Comox as far as the wharf, where a stand-pipe will be installed to accommodate boats calling at the port. The much-needed supply was formally turned on by Mr. R. J. Kilberg on Wednesday at St. Joseph's Hospital on Wednesday by Mr. R. J. Kilberg on behalf of the company which undertook the financing and construction of the pipeline.

A little over four miles of four-inch wood stave pipe has been laid in order to make possible the extension of the supply of crystal-clear water from Courtenay, thousands of feet up in the mountains, from its former terminus in the city of Courtenay. In spite of the fact that the new pipeline was financed and constructed by a syndicate of the people of Comox, it is nevertheless part of the city of Courtenay's water system, and as such will be administered by the city. The long-felt want of water at Comox, where water has been at a premium in the dry seasons, particularly at the hospital where the lack of it has always been a serious matter, the extension now affords adequate protection, as the pressure is said to be good. Connections for private consumers are now being made and most of these will be completed within the next few days.

TWO DELEGATES TO GO TO VANCOUVER

Rally of Women's Benevolent Association Next Week—Whist Party by Porter Chapter

CHEMUNUS, Oct. 22.—A meeting of Chemunus Review No. 19, W.B.A., was held in the K.P. Hall recently. A discussion was held regarding the Provincial rally to be held in Vancouver on October 28, and it was decided to send two delegates from the local review. A silver tea set is to be given under the auspices of the W.B.A. on October 29 at the home of Mrs. G. McInnes. One new member was initiated and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the business.

On Monday evening, October 25, the physical culture classes will be open for the winter season. Plans for the season will be discussed at the first meeting.

On Thursday evening Colonel and Major Rice, of Duncan, gave the second of their illustrated lectures on Biblical subjects, the lecture and pictures being much enjoyed.

Under the auspices of the Porter Chapter, I.O.G.E., an enjoyable whist party was held at Mrs. Smiley's home on Thursday evening, ten tables being in play. The prizes were won by the following: Mrs. Halberg and Mr. Baker, first prize; Miss Doris Cathcart and Mr. Weicker, second prize; Mrs. Baker and Mrs. W. J. Porter, consolation prizes. During the evening Mrs. Kyle, of Duncan, sang several songs which were much enjoyed; dainty refreshments were served by the members of the chapter. The sum of $25 was realized, this including $5.15 from the raffle of a box of candy, which was won by Mrs. Kyle. Several Duncan visitors were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Kyle, Mr. and Mrs. Block, Mrs. Christmas and Mrs. Carr-Hilton.

SIDNEY ACTIVITIES IN VARIOUS SOCIETIES

North Saanich Branch of Canadian Legion Will Hear Col. Robertson Shortly

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was held in the school room on Tuesday evening. The president, Mrs. Gilman, occupied the chair. The secretary, Miss Houldsworth, read the minutes, which were adopted as read. It was decided that a shield should be given to the room boy represented by the attendance of parents, and it is to be competed for each month. The question of a Christmas treat for the scholars was discussed, and it was suggested that it take the form of a supper, followed by a fancy dress dance. A committee consisting of Mrs. Gilman, Mrs. Shade, Mrs. Mounce and Mrs. Houldsworth were appointed to make the necessary arrangements. At the close of the business meeting, Mr. Duff gave an interesting address on "The Progress in Education." A pleasant half hour was then enjoyed and refreshments were served.

The regular weekly meeting of the Sidney Social Club was held in the dining room of Berquist Hall on Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance of members and their friends who spent a most enjoyable time. Military five hundred was played at six tables and the winners of the prizes were: Mrs. J. Crossley, Miss Iris Hawk, Mr. A. Harvey and Mr. S. McDonald. Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the game by Mrs. J. Peck and Mrs. Lidgate.

The trustees of the Sidney and North Saanich War Memorial Park Society will hold a meeting in the Sidney Pharmacy, on Friday evening, Oct. 22, at 8 o'clock sharp.

The next meeting of the North Saanich Branch of the Canadian Legion, will be held in the club rooms, Matthews' Hall, Nov. 2, Tuesday, Nov. 2, Lieutenant-Col. F. A. Robertson, chairman of the B.C. Returned Soldier Commission will address the members on the work of that department during the past seven years, also as one of the members of the trustees of the Canteen Fund, he will discuss matters in connection with the fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Whiting entertained a number of immediate friends and relatives at their home on Eighth Street, on Tuesday evening, October 19, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The evening passed very pleasantly at games and music. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting were the recipients of many lovely pieces of silver. The guests included

CUMBERLAND PARENT-TEACHERS CONFER

Care of Teeth Is Strongly Stressed in Early Years of Child—Active Plans for Winter

CUMBERLAND, Oct. 22.—That the Parent-Teacher Association has become a force to be reckoned with in school affairs was clearly shown at the meeting of the Cumberland Association when it was reported that the membership was now one hundred and eleven strong. It was the first regular meeting of the new term and the new president, Mrs. G. W. Clinton, was in the chair.

Supervised Games
The games and play movement was the chief topic of discussion, several committees being appointed to take charge of this department and a number of individuals also offering their assistance as coaches. Games selected for supervision are as follows: grass hockey, soccer, basketball, badminton, tennis, foot-racing, while first-aid work and physical drill are also contemplated.

New equipment will have to be purchased, and in order to raise the necessary money the P.T. Association made plans for a tea and concert to be given soon. The teachers are solidly behind this "play" movement and if it is carried to fruition, as seems probable, it will be of inestimable value to the children of Cumberland. It was brought out at the meeting that many have volunteered to attend at the school to supervise the games of the primary classes, but more are needed, and it is expected that volunteers will not be lacking.

Care of Teeth
The chief speaker of the evening, to whom much credit is due for the success of the meeting, was Dr. W. Bruce Gordon, who received

Banquet Is Well Attended at Nanaimo

NANAIMO, Oct. 22.—The Nanaimo Conservative Association held a most successful banquet in the Foresters' Hall last night, which was attended by upward of two hundred persons. Among those present were: Mr. C. H. Dickie, M.P., and Col. C. Peck, V.C. A very enjoyable programme was rendered during the evening, to which the following artists contributed: Col. Peck, Mr. D. R. McDonald, Mr. Charles Meek, Mr. Dickie, Mr. N. Kirkham, Mr. W. Pashley, Mr. J. Hamilton, Mrs. McCourt, Miss Barrie.

Mrs. Peck Passes

NANAIMO, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Elizabeth Peck, eighty-one, a resident of Nanaimo for the past sixty-four years, died at her home, corner of Cavan and Illecote Streets at 2:15 yesterday afternoon. Coming to Nanaimo sixty-four years ago, Mrs. Peck's husband, the late Thomas E. Peck, acted as Nanaimo's first Customs officer, later entering into the hotel business, being for several years proprietor of the Peck Hotel. The late Mrs. Peck is survived by two sons, Claude, of Nanaimo, and Sidney, of Nanaimo Bay. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the D. J. Jenkins, Ltd., Chapel, Rev. S. Ryall officiating.

Card Party Held

MOUNT NEWTON, Oct. 22.—The first of the winter series of card parties given under the auspices of the Mount Newton Social Club was held on Wednesday evening in the clubrooms, eleven tables being engaged in play. The prize winners were: First, with twenty-five discs, the players being Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Wallace, Mr. T. S. P. Buckle and Mrs. Overton, and the second prize going to Mr. and Mrs. J. (abornie, Miss Gladys Guy and Mr. J. M. Malcolm.

Nursing Service Meeting

COLUMBIA, Oct. 22.—The annual meeting of the Esquimalt Rural Nursing Service will be held in the Colwood Hall on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Following the reading of reports and election of officers, a social time will be spent during which a musical programme will be given. Refreshments will also be served. The committee hopes that the districts included in the service will be well represented.

Smith—"Oh, no; just a little paint scratched off both."

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to cure it, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home. Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, gives relief, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosen a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lift the phlegm, loosen the membranes, and give almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat, tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable gualac, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give complete satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

PINEX for Coughs

praise for his address on the care of children's teeth. Dr. Gordon said in part:

"I wish to thank the P.T. A. for the privilege of again addressing them on the care of children's teeth. It is a subject in which we are all interested and means a great deal in the physical development and scholastic advancement of the child concerned."

"The most important period in a child's life is the first twelve years. The growth and development up to that age is very rapid and that is the foundation on which we expect to build the man or woman. Without good, sound teeth we cannot hope to erect a strong, solid foundation. The baby teeth must be kept in proper condition if good health and sound, regular and permanent teeth are desired. Temporary teeth are just as important as permanent teeth are to the adult, and it was not until recently that we discovered that at least four-fifths of the trouble people have with their teeth in adult years is due to neglect of the first set. Parents generally are under the impression that it is not worth while to concern themselves much about the first set, as they are only temporary and must be lost sooner or later. This is a grave mistake, because the proper development of the jaw depends largely if not wholly upon the length of time the first teeth are retained."

"The care of the teeth from the time the first tooth appears until the child enters school is entirely in the hands of the parents. After the child enters school the medical examiner or dental examiner should advise the parents. It is estimated that about ninety per cent of the children entering school need dental attention. This is not always because the teeth have not been properly cleaned. The incorrect diet of the mother during the pre-natal period is responsible for a large amount of decay."

"I would like to say a few words about a tooth brush. In the case of a young child one of the smaller sizes is best, medium stiffness in the bristles and the careful instruction of the parent as to the proper method of brushing, which should be of a rotating up and down motion in preference to the normal manner of brushing straight across the teeth."

This should be done three times a day and just before retiring at night. The last being the most important. It is also best to teach the child to have pride in the appearance of the teeth and such little things as having a particular place to hang the brush and marking initials on the handle will often help the child to take pride in this daily routine. Care should be taken to see that the brush itself is kept in a sanitary condition and any well known tooth paste may be used."

Banquet Is Held

NANAIMO, Oct. 22.—Celebrating the thirty-fifth year of the establishment of the Haliburton Street United Church last evening, a banquet was held, with Rev. Mr. Welch presiding as chairman. The evening proved most interesting, and the enjoyment was added to by a musical programme contributed to by the following: Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Seales, Mr. Welch, R. Lester, Mrs. Bradwell, Mr. Stevenson, Miss Reynolds, Miss White, Miss Rothery and Miss Arrol.

Duck Shooting Dull

COWICHAN BAY, Oct. 22.—The duck shooting is not as good this season, owing to the fine weather. A good storm would bring them in from outside waters. Several fishermen have come in with fine catches of cod. Cohoes are biting fairly well, but most of the fish are leaving for the spawning grounds.

Women's Institute To Meet Tuesday

LANGFORD, Oct. 22.—The monthly meeting of the Women's Institute will be held on Tuesday, October 22, at 2 o'clock, at the Institute Hall, Dunford Road. Several important questions will be discussed, and the official report of the conference will be read. Each member is asked to bring suggestions or ideas for Christmas gifts.

Mrs. T. Cleimison, of Grande Prairie, was the guest of friends on the Goldenrod Road on Thursday.

Service followed by Holy communion will be held at St. Matthew's on Sunday at 11 a.m.

Mrs. J. L. Brown, the president of the Women's Institute, the secretary, and Miss L. Savory have been attending the sessions of the Island Conference of Women's Institutes held in Victoria this week.

A number of properties in the vicinity have been sold within the last month.

Civil Servants Elect Officers From Ottawa

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Members of the executive of the Civil Service Federation of Canada met acting Premier J. A. Robb and Mr. Peter Hoenan, Federal Minister of Labor, yesterday.

Three questions of prime importance were taken up. The reclassification of civil service salaries, the superannuation act and the formation of civil service councils.

The association elected the following officers, all of Ottawa: President, T. R. L. MacInnis, Department of Indian Affairs; first vice-president, T. H. Burns, Department of Customs; secretary, J. H. Ryan, Postoffice; treasurer, John Lawson, Penitentiary Board.

Gold Find Is Reported Near Pembroke, Ontario

PEMBROKE, Ont., Oct. 22.—The township of Bagland, Renfrew County, just north of here, has developed a miniature gold rush. It became known here today, with the departure of several local residents for the field of mining operations, following the discovery on a farm situated near Hardwood Lake, of rock declared to contain large percentages of gold and copper.
